Air Controllers Return To Posts After 'Sick Call'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The return to work on a normal basis. The controllers either called in sick in unusually high numbers Thursday or applied Federal Aviation Administration safety rules so strictly that planes were up to four hours behind flights.

F. Lee Bailey, attorney for the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, signaled an end to the dispute when he said this morning the group had urged its members to

Bank Defends Interest Hike As Necessity

Claim Action
Reduced Danger
Of New Spiral

WASHINGTON (AP) — The bank that started the climb in prime interest rates to a historic high told Congress today its action reduced rather than increased dangers to the economy.

Alfred Brittain III, president of Bankers Trust Co. of New York, testified that "we have prevented our lending capacity from being overrun and have made sure that funds will remain available for the essential needs, above all, of our small businesses and other customers who cannot finance themselves in the securities market."

Bankers Trust was the first to announce an increase June 9 from 7 1/2 to 8 1/2 per cent in the prime rate. Banks across the country quickly followed.

In testimony prepared for the House Banking Committee, Brittain said the bank will continue to finance residential mortgages at 7 1/2 per cent and raise rates to small business borrowers less than the 1 per cent jump in the prime rate charged its biggest and best customers.

The committee opened an (Continued on Page 18)

Rhodesians To Break With Britain

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Rhodesians began voting today on a final break with Britain and constitutional changes that would entrench white supremacy into the middle of the next century. The predominantly white electorate was expected to say "yes" to both.

Long lines at many polling places augured a heavy turnout of Rhodesia's 90,000 eligible voters, of whom 10,000 are non-whites. The ruling Rhodesian Front party forecast a solid yes vote in the two-question referendum—one on the new constitution and the other on whether this African country should become the world's newest republic.

Party Secretary Rodney Simmonds said it was a choice between "the permanent entrenchment of white civilization in Rhodesia or rapid acceleration to irresponsible African majority rule."

This country, rich in minerals, tobacco and grain crops, is almost as big as California. It has 4.4 million Africans and about 237,000 whites.

Viet War, Inflation Hold Top Billing With President

Nixon Indicates Viet Cuts Possible

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's newest comments on U.S. troop withdrawal are being interpreted by some military sources as meaning 250,000 American servicemen could be out of Vietnam by the end of 1970.

Nixon said Thursday "I would hope that we could beat" a timetable proposed by former Secretary of Defense Clark M. Clifford calling for the pullout of 100,000 troops by this year's end and all U.S. ground combat forces by the close of 1970.

Military sources, after Nixon's news conference, noted the President referred to action already taken to withdraw one-tenth of American fighting forces, meaning the 25,000 who will come out in July and August.

The 25,000 is considered by the administration as the equivalent of a combat division "package," counting support elements.

There are 10 Army and Marine divisions or equivalent in Vietnam. If all these ground combat packages were brought out, it would total about 250,000 men, officials suggest.

That still would leave nearly 300,000 men in Vietnam to provide air, helicopter, artillery and other backup for the South Vietnamese infantry. Gradually these backup elements would be reduced as the South Vietnamese took over their functions.

Military planners have contended it would take about two years to complete an orderly withdrawal of the roughly 540,000 U.S. troops in Vietnam and huge amounts of equipment and supplies, other than what would be left behind for the South Vietnamese.

As for further withdrawals after the first 25,000, Nixon said "another decision will be made in August."

The number, the President said, "will depend upon the extent of the training of the South Vietnamese, as well as developments in Paris, and the other factors that I have mentioned previously."

One such factor would be the level of enemy military activity.

Nixon told the nation "there is no substantial evidence, publicly," that the time has come for substantive negotiations with the enemy in Paris, where the peace talks are in a virtual stalemate.

However, the President said he is not pessimistic about the outcome and said "we hope within the next two or three months to see some progress" in discussions.

Thinking has been in terms of removing possibly up to 70,000 troops, overall, by the first of next year. Nixon's remarks opened the prospect of raising the goal to 100,000 or more this year.

Eyes Massive Ground Troop Cuts By 1971

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon says he holds out hope for massive troop withdrawals from Vietnam by the end of 1970 and that his efforts to bank the nation's inflationary fires will start having an effect within two or three months.

Nixon, in a wide-ranging, 32-minute news conference Thursday, also touched on the outcome of municipal elections in New York City, his missile defense system and who ordered a wiretap of Dr. Luther King's telephone.

But Vietnam was Topic A of his first nationally televised and broadcast meeting with newsmen April 18.

Asked about a proposal by former Democratic Secretary of Defense Clark Clifford that 100,000 U.S. combat troops be pulled out of Vietnam by the end of the year, and that all combat ground forces withdraw by the end of 1970, Nixon said:

"As far as how many will be withdrawn by the end of this year, or the end of next year, I would hope that we could beat Mr. Clifford's timetable..."

At the June 8 Midway summit meeting between Nixon and South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu, an initial plan to pull out 25,000 Americans later this summer was announced.

"We will withdraw more," Nixon told his news conference, promising another review of the situation in August.

When asked to assess the troubled economy, the chief executive said actions taken by his administration "will begin to have effect within a matter of two to three months" in cooling off the inflation spiral. But he added, rather ominously:

"If our projection proves to be wrong, then we will have to look to other courses of action, because we cannot allow prices to continue to go up, interest to go up, and the other factors... to continue."

He did not elaborate but Secretary of the Treasury David M. Kennedy suggested last week that wage-price controls might be sought should the situation get out of hand, although the White House said there are no plans for such action at this time.

Asked for his reading of victory candidates for mayor of Los Angeles and Minneapolis, and similar (Continued on Page 2)

Reds Storm U.S. Artillery Base; Lose 72 More Men

SAIGON (AP) — More than 500 North Vietnamese soldiers stormed a U.S. artillery base 15 miles north of Tay Ninh City early today and American headquarters said, "An undetermined number penetrated the perimeter but were repulsed."

The attack was reported a few hours after military spokesmen said a massive enemy drive against Tay Ninh City had "fizzled."

Spokesmen said 72 enemy troops were killed in the assault. U.S. casualties were seven killed and 18 wounded.

It raised to 475 the number of North Vietnamese and Viet Cong reported killed in fierce fighting around Tay Ninh City since early Thursday. Total U.S. casualties in the past 24 hours were put at 15 killed and 48 wounded, while South Vietnamese casualties were 14 killed and more than 20 wounded.

Tay Ninh City is a key provincial capital near the Cambodian border, 50 miles northwest of Saigon. Spokesmen said the North Vietnamese force attacked Firebase Ike, 15 miles to the north, shortly after midnight, charging behind rockets and mortar fire that pinned down the 150 defenders U.S. 1st Air Cavalry Division soldiers.

The Americans fought back with rifles and machine guns while helicopter gunships and artillery pounded the attackers. The North Vietnamese withdrew after 75 minutes of close quarters fighting.

While the battle raged, two waves of B52 bombers dumped 360 tons of explosives on North Vietnamese troop concentrations just north of Firebase Ike in the northern half of Tay Ninh province. Spokesmen said the strikes were aimed at smashing North Vietnamese reserve troops.

Far to the north, more of the big Stratofortresses dropped another 360 tons of bombs on North Vietnamese bases, troops and bunker complexes between Ap Bia Mountain and the Lao-titan border.

On Thursday, Maj. Gen. John M. Wright, commander of the 101st Airborne Division, said North Vietnamese troops have set up bases on the hills and ridges surrounding the mountain.

50,000 Army Desertions Expected In Year's Time

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army says it expects 50,000 soldiers will have deserted by the end of the current fiscal year, an increase of nearly 30 per cent over 1968.

In testimony released today, Lt. Gen. A. O. Conner, Army deputy chief of staff for personnel, told the House defense appropriations subcommittee, the jump in the number of soldiers going over the hill is the result of:

"Getting more kooks into the Army, for one thing. We are getting more young men who are coming in undisciplined, the product of a society that trains them to resist authority."

The subcommittee also released testimony from Vice Adm. G. M. Davis, chief of Navy medicine, that 2,372 sailors were discharged for drug abuse in 1968—a three-fold climb over 1967.

"It is actually alarming," Davis said during the closed hearings held last March. The problem is most severe in Vietnam, he said, "and that makes it worse because particularly in the Marine Corps, and with the use of marijuana, it distorts your judgment and you can see what it might do on a patrol to a man who perhaps is not well grounded."

Conner, who said the 50,000 figure was a projection based on the first quarter of the fiscal year ending June 30, also stated that over 500 soldiers deserted to foreign nations.

"In this group," he testified, "that are deserting to foreign countries it runs the gamut from the extreme pacifist to the no-good drug addict who is just trying to escape detention."

The General said although the increase in desertions is cause for concern, the figures are still far lower than during World War II and the Korean War.

Typical deserters, Conner

said, are not philosophical or religious war objectors, but misfits "who because they cannot get satisfaction from their commander on the ground or because the commander is not far enough along in his development to handle their problems, who will take off and go AWOL."

Rocky Visit To Paraguay Is Extended

ASUNCION, Paraguay (AP) — Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller extended his visit to Paraguay one day, until Saturday and agreed to a change of destination in Uruguay, his next stop, because of threatened demonstrations there.

After a week of clashes between police and students in Montevideo, Uruguayan officials announced Rockefeller would bypass their capital and fly to the secluded resort of Punta del Este for his talks with President Jorge Pacheco Areco.

Rockefeller meets today with President Alfredo Stroessner of Paraguay, who has prepared a request for $115 million in long-term American loans for Rockefeller to take back to President Nixon.

The New York governor arrived to a warm welcome at Asuncion airport Thursday where several thousand persons cheered him. Rockefeller told them he was "encantado"—very pleased—then went over to shake hands with a crowd in a roped off area.

But some Paraguayan students said they will try to stage a demonstration before Rockefeller leaves.

M16 Supplier Lags Behind

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the two new suppliers of M16 rifles for the Vietnam war is scrambling to catch up with the Army's delivery schedule and stay in the running for huge new rifle contracts to be awarded this summer.

As of May 31, Harrington & Richardson Inc. had supplied 12,210 of the lightweight, rapid-firing weapons used by combat troops in Vietnam. The delivery schedule on the controversial contract the Worcester, Mass., firm received last spring called for supply of 19,000 rifles by that date.

The Army stirred a wave of congressional criticism a year ago when it awarded M16 contracts to H&R and to General Motors' Hydramatic Division. The House and Senate Armed Services Committee launched investigations after the Associated Press disclosed that the Army would be paying the new suppliers far more than it had to buy M16s from Colt's Inc. of Hartford, Conn.

It also was disclosed then that two other companies which had sought the contracts were prepared to supply the rifles at a lower price than either GM or H&R.

The Army told Congress it had not considered price. Army officials said they chose GM and H&R on grounds they were best qualified to supply quality weapons under an accelerated production schedule.

An Army spokesman said Thursday that H&R had fallen short of the contract delivery schedule for three of the first four months of production. He added that the company has corrected its problems and expects to be on schedule by July 31.

Cincy Policemen Are Reprimanded

CINCINNATI (AP) — Police Chief Jacob Schott officially reprimanded two traffic bureau patrolmen Thursday and ordered them to work off-days for violating department rules while making an arrest.

Schott took the action, on recommendation of a police board of inquiry, against Patrolmen Howard Mills, 38, and Kenneth Storts, 36.

Thomas Harrison, 16, charged that the two used unnecessary force in arresting him May 28 and one struck him in the stomach. He allegedly was soliciting money from persons who parked their cars near Crosley Field.

Constitutional Convention Hinges On One More State

By JOHN CHADWICK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The key to whether the nation will have its first constitutional convention since the Founding Fathers met in the "Grand Convention" of 1787 appears to be in the hands of the Wisconsin legislature.

Legislatures of 33 states already have adopted resolutions petitioning Congress to call a convention aimed at overturning a 1964 Supreme Court decision requiring a one-man, one-vote basis for apportioning state legislatures.

Action by only one more state would invoke Article V of the Constitution, which provides that upon application of the legislatures of two-thirds of the states Congress shall call a convention for the purpose of proposing amendments.

An Associated Press survey spotlights the Wisconsin legislature as the one where the chances of putting the move over are best, although the resolution faces an uphill fight.

Two years ago the Wisconsin Senate passed a resolution asking for a constitutional convention on the reapportionment issue, but the measure died in the Assembly.

If Wisconsin—or some other state—becomes the 34th to petition for a convention, Congress will be plunged into a momentous debate and, in the opinion of some members, a constitutional crisis of major proportions.

Basically, despite some differences in wording, the petitions to Congress ask for a constitutional convention for proposing an amendment that would permit factors other than population to be taken into account in apportionment of one branch of a state legislature.

Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois has tried twice to win Senate approval of such an amendment.

Each time Dirksen got a majority but not the necessary two-thirds margin. Since then, without fanfare, he has been pushing the drive in state legislatures for a constitutional convention.

Under the Constitution, amendments can be proposed in two ways: Congress can submit them to the states, after approval by a two-thirds majority in both the Senate and the House, or amendments can be submitted by a convention.

In either case, amendments have to be ratified by three-fourths of the states before becoming effective.

The convention route never has been used.

Robert Michniak, 22, described by his mother as quiet, withdrawn and often nervous, climbed nearly 100 feet to the top of the span Thursday and fired four shots into the air. Police were called.

North Vietnam Radio Plays Up Clifford Speech

HONG KONG (AP) — North Vietnam's official radio broadcast today reports of former Defense Secretary Clark Clifford's call for removal of 250,000 American troops from Vietnam by 1970.

Throughout the day, Radio Hanoi's newscasts gave major play to Clifford's statement and followed with reports of support for his stand by other American officials.

"Among those supporting Clifford and opposing Nixon are such important senate leaders as Fulbright, Gore, Kennedy, Mansfield and McGovern as well as former Paris delegate Harriman," the broadcasts said.

The North Vietnamese station said "all this proves the depth of American opposition" to the Vietnam war.

Nixon, in a wide-ranging, 32-minute news conference Thursday, also touched on the outcome of municipal elections in New York City, his missile defense system and who ordered a wiretap of Dr. Luther King's telephone.

But Vietnam was Topic A of his first nationally televised and broadcast meeting with newsmen April 18.

Asked about a proposal by former Democratic Secretary of Defense Clark Clifford that 100,000 U.S. combat troops be pulled out of Vietnam by the end of the year, and that all combat ground forces withdraw by the end of 1970, Nixon said:

"As far as how many will be withdrawn by the end of this year, or the end of next year, I would hope that we could beat Mr. Clifford's timetable..."

At the June 8 Midway summit meeting between Nixon and South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu, an initial plan to pull out 25,000 Americans later this summer was announced.

"We will withdraw more," Nixon told his news conference, promising another review of the situation in August.

When asked to assess the troubled economy, the chief executive said actions taken by his administration "will begin to have effect within a matter of two to three months" in cooling off the inflation spiral. But he added, rather ominously:

"If our projection proves to be wrong, then we will have to look to other courses of action, because we cannot allow prices to continue to go up, interest to go up, and the other factors... to continue."

He did not elaborate but Secretary of the Treasury David M. Kennedy suggested last week that wage-price controls might be sought should the situation get out of hand, although the White House said there are no plans for such action at this time.

Asked for his reading of victories by generally conservative candidates for mayor of Los Angeles and Minneapolis, and similar (Continued on Page 2)

WASHINGTON (AP) — Police Chief Jacob Schott officially reprimanded two traffic bureau patrolmen Thursday and ordered them to work off-days for violating department rules while making an arrest.

Schott took the action, on recommendation of a police board of inquiry, against Patrolmen Howard Mills, 38, and Kenneth Storts, 36.

Thomas Harrison, 16, charged that the two used unnecessary force in arresting him May 28 and one struck him in the stomach. He allegedly was soliciting money from persons who parked their cars near Crosley Field.

FIVE men took civil service examinations given Thursday by Circleville's civil service commission... One man took the exam for patrolman on the police force, two for the city fire department, one for distribution maintenance of the water department and one for water plant operator...

One of the primary reasons for giving the civil service exam was to secure more men for the badly understaffed police department... The force is five men short of its authorized strength... At least three other members of the department have indicated they are seeking employment elsewhere.

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the two new suppliers of M16 rifles for the Vietnam war is scrambling to catch up with the Army's delivery schedule and stay in the running for huge new rifle contracts to be awarded this summer.

As of May 31, Harrington & Richardson Inc. had supplied 12,210 of the lightweight, rapid-firing weapons used by combat troops in Vietnam. The delivery schedule on the controversial contract the Worcester, Mass., firm received last spring called for supply of 19,000 rifles by that date.

The Army stirred a wave of congressional criticism a year ago when it awarded M16 contracts to H&R and to General Motors' Hydramatic Division. The House and Senate Armed Services Committee launched investigations after the Associated Press disclosed that the Army would be paying the new suppliers far more than it had to buy M16s from Colt's Inc. of Hartford, Conn.

It also was disclosed then that two other companies which had sought the contracts were prepared to supply the rifles at a lower price than either GM or H&R.

The Army told Congress it had not considered price. Army officials said they chose GM and H&R on grounds they were best qualified to supply quality weapons under an accelerated production schedule.

An Army spokesman said Thursday that H&R had fallen short of the contract delivery schedule for three of the first four months of production. He added that the company has corrected its problems and expects to be on schedule by July 31.

$1,400,000 Bond Issue OK'd By Westfall Board

The Westfall Board of Education Monday passed a resolution to place a $1,400,000 bond issue on the November ballot.

The bond issue is for the construction of a building to house grades one to six. The proposed structure will be located at the site of the present high school.

The proposed school will contain two buildings connected by a hall. One will house 24 classrooms and the other 11 classrooms. There will also be a multipurpose room and cafeteria included in the building.

The new building will replace the four elementary schools in the district if it gains voter approval in the November election.

GRADES seven and eight would continue to be housed at either Jackson School or Monroe School.

In other business, the board has accepted the resignation of Miss Brenda Hawkins, English and foreign language teacher.

They accepted the bid of Superior Coach Company for repair of school bus bodies.

The board met with the Westfall Education Assn.'s negotiating committee. A salary schedule for custodians was established.

A tentative budget was approved. The budget shows estimated receipts of $773,996.21 and expenditures of $872,812.84. This budget shows a deficit of $98,816.63 for Jan. 1, 1971.

quick bursts of two to six shots. Police, under orders not to shoot, said Michniak fired a total of 45 rounds. At least 20 ripped into patrol cars and police vans.

One policeman was hit in the hand by a bullet fragment.

Finally Michniak pointed the gun to his head, fired and slumped out of sight.

Three patrolmen wearing bulletproof vests and helmets cautiously made their way up an aerial ladder and found him lying on the beam.

Michniak was taken to Allegheny General Hospital where he underwent brain surgery. Doctors said his condition was serious.

The shooting was broadcast live by a Pittsburgh television station and among the viewers was his mother, Mrs. Arvilla Michniak, who was in her home in Bethesda, Ohio, 70 miles away.

ilar upsets by conservative forces in both the Republican and Democratic primaries for mayor of New York, Nixon jabbed at his Adam's apple and said:

"This is the message that comes through rather loud and clear from these elections: the American people in our cities, in our small towns, and in this country are fed up to here with violence and lawlessness and they want candidates who will take a strong stand against it. I think that is the message for the candidates in the future."

While saying the people are voting against lawlessness, the President declared:

"I do not believe the great majority of the American people in our cities are anti-Negro. I do not believe they are anti-progressive or anti-welfare, or reactionary, or members of hate groups."

On the major military controversy of 1969—whether to authorize a Nixon-sponsored Safeguard antiballistic missile system—the President said flat out:

"We will win the fight on Safeguard. It will not be necessary to compromise."

On another foreign policy topic, Nixon expressed regret that the tense Middle East situation has not been defused during his tenure. But he called it a plus that the Soviet Union, Britain and France are joined with the United States for four-way talks that hopefully might produce "some basis of communication" between Arabs and Israel.

As for planned talks between the United States and the Soviet Union on possible limitation of strategic arms, Nixon guessed these might start between July 31 and Aug. 15, either in Vienna or Geneva.

On the subject of campus disorders, Nixon said he opposes legislation that could cut off federal aid "from any college or university in which there was a demonstration."

He said the federal government can't be the policeman of every campus but, hopefully, the administration can develop "new legal remedies that might be available to college administrators to use where violence or lawlessness does occur."

On other domestic matters, Nixon said:

—FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, embroiled in a controversy over wiretaps placed on the home of the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., enjoys his full confidence and there has been no talk of replacing him. Nixon said he is convinced Hoover acted properly in placing the tap.
—Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Robert H. Finch will recommend next week a nominee for the still-vacant key post of assistant secretary for health and scientific affairs. Finch has favored Boston Dr. John Knowles for the post. But Senate GOP Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois has objected. Nixon said Finch's final decision will be backed up by the White House.

Irish Ruling Party Wins Razor-Thin Vote Majority

DUBLIN (AP) — Prime Minister Jack Lynch's conservative Fianna Fail party appeared today to have won a razor-thin majority in Ireland's parliamentary elections. Lynch called it "a great victory."

With 17 of the 143 contested seats still undecided, the Fianna Fail—Soldiers of Destiny—held 66 seats in the Dail, the lower house of Parliament. The Centrist Fine Gael-Irish party—had captured 44 seats, and the leftist Labor party won 16.

Rehabilitation Program Pays

Members of the Pickaway County Comprehensive Health Planning Committee were told that an individual who is trained in a vocational rehabilitation program will return the cost of his training to the taxpayers within three to five years in the taxes he will pay as a productive member of society.

The speaker was Lowell D. Bassett, Coordinator of the Bureau of Vocational Rehabilitation. He, along with Jack Powell, local counselor, showed a film dealing with vocational rehabilitation to the Comprehensive Planning group during their meeting Thursday evening in the dining room of Berger Hospital.

Mrs. Sterling Poling, committee chairman, also introduced Donald Hough, administrator, who explained how the local workshop for the mentally retarded is providing skills for mentally handicapped in Pickaway County.

The need for a Health and Welfare Directory for Pickaway County was discussed and further study on this will be completed with Mrs. Roloff Wolford and Everett Beers studying directories in use in other counties. Recommendations will be made at the next meeting on July 17. The various sub-committees will also make progress reports at that time.

Mrs. Poling attended the annual meeting of the Columbus Hospital Federation Board of Trustees last week as the Pickaway County representative on their recently expanded Board.

Members of the Pickaway County Board of Health were guests at the planning committee meeting.

Presented As A Public Service Every Day By FIRST NATIONAL BANK Circleville

The vote confounded politicians and writers who had predicted that Lynch's party would lose its two-seat edge in the Dail and said the prime minister would have to form a minority government or call for new elections in the fall.

Fianna Fail had campaigned on its record of encouraging industrial growth and increasing welfare benefits during its 12 years in power. Fine Gael called for expanded welfare aid and a crash housing program. The Laborites, boosted by the candidacy of several intellectuals and well-known farmers for the party's first national campaign effort, were pushing for establishment of a welfare state and for giving workers a voice in industry.

Lynch's entire Cabinet was re-elected. Dail seats also went to Fine Gael leader Liam Cosgrave, President Eamon de Valera's son Vivion de Valera and Laborite Conor Cruise O'Brien. O'Brien, 51, one of his party's recent recruits, is a former humanities professor at New York University and was the chief U.N. representative in the Congo during the chaotic days of Congolese independence in 1961. He quit the U.N. post amid a flurry of accusations against the late Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld's handling of the crisis and accepted the vice chancellorship of Ghana's university.

O'Brien left Ghana critical of government interference in university affairs and accepted the Schweitzer chair in humanities at NYU.

In December 1967, he was arrested on a charge of disturbing the peace while participating in a demonstration in New York against the Vietnam war but was acquitted a few months later.

The Westfall Board of Education Monday passed a resolution to place a $1,400,000 bond issue on the November ballot.

The bond issue is for the construction of a building to house grades one to six. The proposed structure will be located at the site of the present high school.

The proposed school will contain two buildings connected by a hall. One will house 24 classrooms and the other 11 classrooms. There will also be a multipurpose room and cafeteria included in the building.

The new building will replace the four elementary schools in the district if it gains voter approval in the November election.

GRADES seven and eight would continue to be housed at either Jackson School or Monroe School.

In other business, the board has accepted the resignation of Miss Brenda Hawkins, English and foreign language teacher. They accepted the bid of Superior Coach Company for repair of school bus bodies.

The board met with the Westfall Education Assn.'s negotiating committee. A salary schedule for custodians was established.

A tentative budget was approved. The budget shows estimated receipts of $773,996.21 and expenditures of $872,812.84. This budget shows a deficit of $98,817.63 for Jan. 1, 1971.

Eyes Massive

(Continued from Page 1) ilar upsets by conservative forces in both the Republican and Democratic primaries for mayor of New York, Nixon jabbed at his Adam's apple and said:

"This is the message that comes through rather loud and clear from these elections: the American people in our cities, in our small towns, and in this country are fed up to here with violence and lawlessness and they want candidates who will take a strong stand against it. I think that is the message for the candidates in the future."

While saying the people are voting against lawlessness, the President declared:

"I do not believe the great majority of the American people in our cities are anti-Negro. I do not believe they are anti-poor or antiwelfare, or reactionary, or members of hate groups."

On the major military controversy of 1969—whether to authorize a Nixon-sponsored Safeguard antiballistic missile system—the President said flat out:

"We will win the fight on Safeguard. It will not be necessary to compromise."

On another foreign policy topic, Nixon expressed regret that the tense Middle East situation has not been defused during his tenure. But he called it a plus that the Soviet Union, Britain and France are joined with the United States for four-way talks that hopefully might produce "some basis of communication" between Arabs and Israel.

As for planned talks between the United States and the Soviet Union on possible limitation of strategic arms, Nixon guessed these might start between July 31 and Aug. 15, either in Vienna or Geneva.

On the subject of campus disorders, Nixon said he opposes legislation that could cut off federal aid "from any college or university in which there was a demonstration."

He said the federal government can't be the policeman of every campus but, hopefully, the administration can develop "new legal remedies that might be available to college administrators to use where violence or lawlessness does occur."

On other domestic matters, Nixon said:

—FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, embroiled in a controversy over wiretaps placed on the home of the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., enjoys his full confidence and there has been no talk of replacing him. Nixon said he is convinced Hoover acted properly in placing the tap.

—Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Robert H. Finch will recommend next week a nominee for the still-vacant key post of assistant secretary for health and scientific affairs. Finch has favored Boston Dr. John Knowles for the post. But Senate GOP Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois has objected. Nixon said Finch's final decision will be backed up by the White House.

Irish Ruling Party Wins Razor-Thin Vote Majority

DUBLIN (AP) — Prime Minister Jack Lynch's conservative Fianna Fail party appeared today to have won a razor-thin majority in Ireland's parliamentary elections. Lynch called it "a great victory."

With 17 of the 143 contested seats still undecided, the Fianna Fail—Soldiers of Destiny—held 66 seats in the Dail, the lower house of Parliament. The Centrist Fine Gael—Irish party—had captured 44 seats, and the leftist Labor party won 16.

Rehabilitation Program Pays

Members of the Pickaway County Comprehensive Health Planning Committee were told that an individual who is trained in a vocational rehabilitation program will return the cost of his training to the taxpayers within three to five years in the taxes he will pay as a productive member of society.

The speaker was Lowell D. Bassett, Coordinator of the Bureau of Vocational Rehabilitation. He, along with Jack Powell, local counselor, showed a film dealing with vocational rehabilitation to the Comprehensive Planning group during their meeting Thursday evening in the dining room of Berger Hospital.

Mrs. Sterling Poling, committee chairman, also introduced Donald Hough, administrator, who explained how the local workshop for the mentally retarded is providing skills for mentally handicapped in Pickaway County.

The need for a Health and Welfare Directory for Pickaway County was discussed and further study on this will be completed with Mrs. Roloff Wolford and Everett Beers studying directories in use in other counties. Recommendations will be made at the next meeting on July 17. The various sub-committees will also make progress reports at that time.

Mrs. Poling attended the annual meeting of the Columbus Hospital Federation Board of Trustees last week as the Pickaway County representative on their recently expanded Board.

Members of the Pickaway County Board of Health were guests at the planning committee meeting.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY
They can conquer, who believe they can. —P. Vergil

Presented As A Public Service Every Day By FIRST NATIONAL BANK Circleville

The vote confounded politicians and writers who had predicted that Lynch's party would lose its two-seat edge in the Dail and said the prime minister would have to form a minority government or call for new elections in the fall.

Fianna Fail had campaigned on its record of encouraging industrial growth and increasing welfare benefits during its 12 years in power. Fine Gael called for expanded welfare aid and a crash housing program. The Laborites, boosted by the candidacy of several intellectuals and well-known farmers for the party's first national campaign effort, were pushing for establishment of a welfare state and for giving workers a voice in industry.

Lynch's entire Cabinet was re-elected. Dail seats also went to Fine Gael leader Liam Cosgrave, President Eamon de Valera's son Vivion de Valera and Laborite Conor Cruise O'Brien. O'Brien, 51, one of his party's recent recruits, is a former humanities professor at New York University and was the chief U.N. representative in the Congo during the chaotic days of Congolese independence in 1961. He quit the U.N. post amid a flurry of accusations against the late Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold's handling of the crisis and accepted the vice chancellorship of Ghana's university.

government interference in university affairs and accepted the Schweitzer chair in humanities at NYU.

In December 1967, he was arrested on a charge of disturbing the peace while participating in a demonstration in New York against the Vietnam war but was acquitted a few months later.

Views On TV - Radio

NEW YORK (AP) — There seemed to be a slight change in the format of President Nixon's news conference as it appeared live on the television networks Thursday night.

The President was—as usual, standing alone against a blue backdrop, but the home viewers had a better chance to see the assembled newsmen and women as they asked their questions.

Nixon handled confidently a wide assortment of queries—ranging from Vietnam to Paris, from campus disorders to New York City politics. The program was timed to one-half hour and went on and off with the precision of a commercial program.

Once is usually enough when to watch most television entertainment shows, but the Thursday night rerun of NBC's "Ironside" was worth a second inspection of its most ingenious script. It utilized, with full credit, one of the most famous real-life British murder stories. It was a contemporary reconstruction of the foul deed of Dr. Crippen who in the gaslight days disposed of an unwanted wife in his cellar.

In the "Ironside" version, a 1969 wife-murderer used the Crippen plan as his own blueprint for homicide. To inject a comedy note in generally grisly business, the crime was uncovered by amateur sleuths, a group of septuagenarians who were members of the victim's bridge club.

This was followed by a rerun of "Dragnet," which showed how Los Angeles police trained a police dog to sniff out concealed marijuana. The going was pretty thin for the human actors, but Ginger, the canine star, was very convincing.

NBC is announcing some of its major specials for next season. High on this docket should be a new production of the 36-year-old musical, "Roberta," which will star Bob Hope who was in the original Broadway show when it opened in 1933.

The musical by Jerome Kern and Otto Harbach has been adapted twice to motion pictures. For its TV debut, it will be taped at the Bob Hope Theatre at Southern Methodist University in Dallas.

Another presentation will be Lena Horne's first American-made TV special. She starred in three taped in London and syndicated in this country. She is, of course, no stranger to American variety shows—she has been a guest star on most of the top network shows.

Children's Home Is Closed Down

GREENVILLE, Ohio (AP)—The Darke County Children's Home was shut down Thursday, a victim of old age. The 81-year-old facility was closed after its last occupant, a 14-year-old boy, was placed in a foster home.

County commissioners decided to close the facility after it was condemned by both the state fire and welfare offices. Conditions were so bad that the State Welfare Department refused to issue even a temporary license after the home's state certificate expired April 1.

'Mod' Religion For Coffee Houses

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The hall is big and mostly dark, except for the garish, oscillating patterns of colored light flashing on the wide screens at either side and behind the throbbing clamor of the band.

Across the broad, dim interior, streaked with racing, phosphorescent beams, about 1,000 young people sit in little groups at white-topped tables, absorbed in the electric rock sounds and the shimmering psychedelic glow.

Then the loud music stops, and a lean, thick-haired guitar player, in bright blue shirt and white pants, with a red kerchief at his neck, steps to the microphone and tells how a relationship with Christ got him off dope.

"It's a fantastic experience," he said. "Jesus gives you a way. He sticks with a man. He's for you, and once you tune in with Him, you just keep wanting to know and love Him better."

Bam, thump and strumming strings. Again, the amplified rock reverberations flood the room; the flowing chromatic lights trace phantom designs on the panels, and a shapely girl in a miniskirt steps up to sing a ballad.

Each night after evangelist Billy Graham's service in Madison Square Garden, where he is devoting special attention to young people, swarms of them migrate a block up the street to keep the mood jumping until midnight.

Boys State Meet Ends

ATHENS, Ohio (AP) — Their ears still ringing from political hoopla and legislative pronouncements, the 1,370 citizens of Buckeye Boys' State participated today in concluding graduation ceremonies.

A highlight of the ceremonies was to be the naming of two of the high school seniors as delegates to Boys' Nation in Washington next month.

Today's program wound up the 32nd American Legion-sponsored School-in-democracy, during which the boys spent 10 days creating a mythical state and adopting laws to govern it.

Perhaps the most significant legislative action, since participants all are teen-agers, was passage of a bill and referendum approval of a constitutional amendment for lowering the voting age to 19.

The measure was one of more than 100 pieces of legislation acted upon by the Federalist and Nationalist party members of the mock general assembly.

USE THE CLASSIFIEDS

religious people," says the Rev. John Guest, the wide-belted, wavy-haired young British Anglican priest who runs the program, and who looks and dresses like a swinger himself.

"Religion is generally regarded as something that belongs only in a staid, musty environment, but what we're saying here is that it fits into the secular world," he said. "It's a new scene."

In between the rock and folk music, and the brief, simple affirmations of faith from the microphones, the table groups hum with conversation, much of it about religion.

"It's fun," said Rosula Niemczyk, 20, Brooklyn, a pretty blonde Catholic who came here two years ago from Germany and still has a piquant accent.

"In here, we don't do anything wrong. The church should be more like this."

A City College student, Kenneth Eden, 20, Queens, N.Y., said the atmosphere seemed "a little too far out, the hard rock and drums and everything. But it probably attracts a lot of people."

The "coffee house approach" marks the first time that Graham, in his 20 years of rallies around the world, has included such a modern generation device as an adjunct to his crusades.

"It's getting back to the Biblical principle of going where the people are," said the handsome, groovy Father Guest, of London. "That's what Jesus did. He met people on their own ground, accepting what they are, talking their talk."

Views On TV - Radio

NEW YORK (AP) — There seemed to be a slight change in the format of President Nixon's news conference as it appeared live on the television networks Thursday night.

The President was—as usual, standing alone against a blue backdrop, but the home viewers had a better chance to see the assembled newsmen and women as they asked their questions.

Nixon handled confidently a wide assortment of queries—ranging from Vietnam to Paris, from campus disorders to New York City politics. The program was timed to one-half hour and went on off with the precision of a commercial program.

Once is usually enough when to watch most television entertainment shows, but the Thursday night rerun of NBC's "Ironside" was worth a second inspection of its most ingenious script. It utilized, with full credit, one of the most famous real-life British murder stories. It was a contemporary reconstruction of the foul deed of Dr. Crippen who in the gaslight days disposed of an unwanted wife in his cellar.

In the "Ironside" version, a 1969 wife-murderer used the Crippen plan as his own blueprint for homicide. To inject a comedy note in generally grisly business, the crime was uncovered by amateur sleuths, a group of septuagenarians who were members of the victim's bridge club.

This was followed by a rerun of "Dragnet," which showed how Los Angeles police trained a police dog to sniff out concealed marijuana. The going was pretty thin for the human actors, but Ginger, the canine star, was very convincing.

NBC is announcing some of its major specials for next season. High on this docket should be a new production of the 36-year-old musical, "Roberta," which will star Bob Hope who was in the original Broadway show when it opened in 1933.

The musical by Jerome Kern and Otto Harbach has been adapted twice to motion pictures. For its TV debut, it will be taped at the Bob Hope Theatre at Southern Methodist University in Dallas.

Another presentation will be Lena Horne's first American-made TV special. She starred in three taped in London and syndicated in this country. She is, of course, no stranger to American variety shows—she has been a guest star on most of the top network shows.

Church Slates Missionary Day Services

Missionary Day will be observed on Sunday at the First Church of Christ in Christian Union on E. Ohio St.

The Rev. Grover Blankenship general missionary superintendent for the Churches of Christ in Christian Union will be the guest speaker during the 10:30 a.m. service. The church choir will present special selections.

The Rev. and Mrs. Ferguson from Athens, will be in charge of the Sunday evening service at 7:30. Rev. Ferguson and family are on furlough from Brazil.

A cordial invitation is extended to the public to attend the services from the missionary president, Mrs. Ellen Holbrook and the pastor, the Rev. Kenneth Fuller.

J. L. De Pugh Receives New Appointment

Jacob L. DePugh of Route 8, Chillicothe, has been appointed works engineering foreman at the Circleville DuPont plant. He has been with the local facility since September, 1954, as a service operator in manufacturing. He was later transferred to maintenance as a mechanic.

Subsequent to this, he held the position of planner in the scheduling section.

DePugh is married and the father of four children. He is active in Little League, is a veteran of the South Pacific and is a member of American Legion Post 757.

Children's Home Is Closed Down

GREENVILLE, Ohio (AP)—The Darke County Children's Home was shut down Thursday, a victim of old age. The 81-year-old facility was closed after its last occupant, a 14-year-old boy, was placed in a foster home.

County commissioners decided to close the facility after it was condemned by both the state fire and welfare offices. Conditions were so bad that the State Welfare Department refused to issue even a temporary license after the home's state certificate expired April 1.

'Mod' Religion For Coffee Houses

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — The hall is big and mostly dark, except for the garish, oscillating patterns of colored light flashing on the wide screens at either side and behind the throbbing clamor of the band.

Boys State Meet Ends

ATHENS, Ohio (AP) — Their ears still ringing from political hoopla and legislative pronouncements, the 1,370 citizens of Buckeye Boys' State participated today in concluding graduation ceremonies.

A highlight of the ceremonies was to be the naming of two of the high school seniors as delegates to Boys' State in Washington next month.

Today's program wound up the 32nd American Legion-sponsored School-in-democracy, during which the boys spent 10 days creating a mythical state and adopting laws to govern it.

Perhaps the most significant legislative action, since participants all are teen-agers, was passage of a bill and referendum approval of a constitutional amendment for lowering the voting age to 19.

The measure was one of more than 100 pieces of legislation acted upon by the Federalist and Nationalist party members of the mock general assembly.

migrate a block up the street to keep the mood jumping until midnight.

"It's a culture shock to most religious people," says the Rev. John Guest, the wide-belted, wavy-haired young British Anglican priest who runs the program, and who looks and dresses like a swinger himself.

"Religion is generally regarded as something that belongs only in a staid, musty environment, but what we're saying here is that it fits into the secular world," he said. "It's a new scene."

In between the rock and folk music, and the brief, simple affirmations of faith from the microphones, the table groups hum with conversation, much of it about religion.

"It's fun," said Rosula Niemczyk, 20, Brooklyn, a pretty blonde Catholic who came here two years ago from Germany and still has a piquant accent.

"In here, we don't do anything wrong. The church should be more like this."

A City College student, Kenneth Eden, 20, Queens, N.Y., said the atmosphere seemed "a little too far out, the hard rock and drums and everything. But it probably attracts a lot of people."

The "coffee house approach" marks the first time that Graham, in his 20 years of rallies around the world, has included such a modern generation device as an adjunct to his crusades.

"It's getting back to the Biblical principle of going where the people are," said the handsome, groovy Father Guest, of London. "That's what Jesus did. He met people on their own ground, accepting what they are, talking their talk."

By JOHN CUNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Some of the nation's critical domestic problems undoubtedly could more easily be solved if people would only stop moving around and let the planners get a handle on things. But that might never happen.

Restlessness has always been a characteristic of Americans who, it must be remembered, got here by moving from the old country, and who once here proceeded to explore a vast 3.6-million square miles of land.

Now, as the offspring of immigrants ascend the economic ladder, it isn't at all uncommon for them to move into a "first home" and then into a larger one and so on as their economic status improves.

America on the move will be clearly in evidence on the nation's highways this summer, when moving vans sometimes will seem common as trailers. One big mover estimates that 18 million Americans will change homes between now and September.

Where is everyone going? From farm to city, for one thing, although that migration is said now to be nearly over after having drained farm population from 30.5 million in 1940 to about 10 million now. The stronger migration in the past two years or so have been from the core city to the suburb—or as some see it, a migration of white from Negro. This out-migration of whites has increased sharply in the past two years.

Speaking to a House Banking subcommittee, a Census Bureau official estimated that nearly 500,000 whites a year now leave the large cities, compared with only 141,000 a year between 1960 and 1966.

For whatever reasons, American industry is playing a big role in this shifting of population, for industry continues to remove itself from the core city and establish in the nearby suburbs.

This not only has reduced the tax base of the cities—or at least slowed its growth—but it has deprived the cities of some of their most knowledgeable and productive citizens, a fact related to the deterioration of real estate, transportation and job opportunities.

A survey by the National Industrial Conference Board, a private research organization supported largely by business, shows that in one five-year period—from 1958 to 1963—the cities lost 300,000 manufacturing jobs while the suburbs gained 400,000.

The NICB suggests that this trend still continues, although probably at a slower rate. Regardless of how slowly it continues, it represents a population drain on the cities, and very probably this drain is almost all white.

Now the Negro population also is getting the idea and it, too, is moving to the suburbs in increasing numbers. Conrad Taeuber, associate director of the Census Bureau, stated that the rate jumped from 19,000 a year in 1960-1965 to 221,000 a year in 1966-1968.

Nevertheless, because of a high birth rate, the number of Negroes in core cities continues to increase, despite no similar growth in jobs or services or improvements in living conditions.

And so the problem is clear and growing: whites and Negroes separating from each other, manufacturing leaving the city and leaving pockets of unemployment also, and a deteriorating tax base.

The Circleville Herald, Fri. June 20, 1969

"What do you suggest for a woman who takes everything back?"

Try and Stop Me

By BENNETT CERF

OLD PUTNEY, chopping away in a deep sand trap, mourned, "I'd move heaven and earth to play this game decently."

"Try heaven," advised his flint-hearted companion. "You've moved enough earth already!"

Daphne Du Maurier, author of the memorable "Rebecca," is about to launch her seventeenth novel. "Good for her," applauds the Literary Guild's Gene Shalit. "Du Maurier du Merrier." And that superb critic, Walter Kerr, gets into punster territory by titling his new collection of theater essays "Thirty Plays Hath November."

Respectable elders in one resort sector, weary of the wicked ways of local and imported hippies and pot-smokers, have approved an ordinance by the City Commission banning obscenity in books, magazines, and phonograph records. Caskie Stinnett uncovered this hilarious feature of the ordinance: it is so specific in describing acts and language that are banned that the local newspaper didn't dare to reprint it in full!

In response to a query about hippies, Victor Borge answered, "I like only one—and that's my wife. In fact, she's been getting a little TOO hippy lately." (He added, "If my wife sees this, it's goodbye forever.")

At a skating carnival, a spectator enthused, "Sonja Henie looks more beautiful than ever." "She should," agreed Borge. "She's been on ice for years."

Speaking Of Your Health

By Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

We are actively raising funds for a community hospital. One of our trustees recalls a statement or a column you wrote about a community hospital that is an ideal one. How does that one differ from the usual structure we now are considering?

Mr. and Mrs. B. R. T., Tennessee

Dear Mr. and Mrs. T.: I distinctly remember expressing my enthusiasm for a particular community hospital which I had the pleasure of visiting in Waterville, Maine. What impressed me was that it was not a creation of bricks and mortar with canyons of marble and steel. The total structure seemed to have woven in its every fiber, warmth and devotion which radiated from the personnel and even from the gentle touches in the architecture.

The kindness, the security and the hope that pervaded the Thayer Hospital are symbols of humanitarian endeavors which should be incorporated in every new community hospital in the country.

The guiding light in the creation of this oasis, far from the so-called sophistication of large communities, was Dr. Frederick T. Hill. This medical and social giant continued his memoirs up to the day he died. Probably the greatest testimonial to him is the fact that the Thayer Community Hospital is constantly aware of the sensitive needs of patients during their time of stress and illness. Dr. Hill had embarked on a program whose object was "to serve with tenderness and skill, all who seek succor."

You would do well to study this community hospital for it is a project that can stand as a beacon of hope for the forlorn, the anxious and the sick. Dr. Hill made his love of mankind the cornerstone of this hospital. It can be duplicated by you. That cornerstone contained endless devotion of man to man.

I have a momentary feeling of dizziness if I make a sudden change of position or if I get up too quickly in the morning. I am 68 years old and am otherwise in good health. Can this mean that I am leading to a stroke or to a brain tumor?

Slogans Get Tougher

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

Anatole Shub, the Washington Post Moscow correspondent who was recently expelled from Moscow, has revealed that the Soviet Novosti, the agency that handles propaganda, has been selling its "news" to western media executives, at the rate of fifty dollars for a forty-minute talk with a medium-level official. Translated into Washington terms, this is as if Herb Kellin, Nixon's information coordinator, were to let Scotty Reston of the New York Times see Arthur Burns or Daniel Patrick Moynihan for a small fee, meanwhile reserving the choicer "news" for the TV media (which, so Shub says, go as high as $500 in Moscow for a good shot of a new Soviet supersonic airliner).

So you believe the news from the Soviet Union, do you? Better ignore those Moscow datelines and concentrate on such excellent analytical sources as Radio Liberty and the Institute for the Study of the USSR, both of which depend on a fine tooth-comb monitoring of the Communist media by experts who are at home in all Slavic tongues.

Every year Radio Liberty and the Institute for the Study of the USSR come through with a close inspection and interpretation of the Kremlin's May Day slogans. Last year, at a time when Richard Nixon, as a candidate for U.S. President, was hoping that the Era of Confrontation might give way to the Era of Negotiation, the May Day slogans forecast a much tougher Soviet line. And, lo and behold, Russian tanks were soon moving through the Carpathian passes into Czechoslovakia.

The May Day slogans for 1969 are no more reassuring than those of a year ago. As Christian Duevel analyzes them for Radio Liberty, we are in for an intensification of the "current reactionary trend" in Soviet domestic policies.

The cries for "vigilance" addressed to the Russian population echo those of "the worst periods of Stalin's terror." "Equally disturbing," says Mr. Duevel, "is the omission, for the first time in many years, of any slogan calling for a rise in the standard of living or material welfare of the people."

It wasn't so very long ago that we were hearing about "Libermanism," which was Moscow shorthand for socialist experimentation with a return to factory autonomy and a free price system. In Czechoslovakia the Communist liberals took the talk about "Libermanism" seriously, and Ota Sik, the Czech economist, worked up a fine program for cutting industry free from the dead hand of the local party bureaucracy. Alas this has all gone with the wind, both in Prague and in Moscow, says Herman A. Achminov, in his analysis of the May Day slogans for the Institute for the Study of the USSR. "The demand for profitability in the economy has finally been dropped from the Central Committee's appeals... the 'economic reform,' which raised such high hopes, has now been watered down out of all recognition, and... orthodox, hard-line Communists have regained the upper hand within the country."

The prospects for a conciliatory Soviet foreign policy toward the U.S. seem also to have gone down the drain. Says Mr. Achminov, "the inclusion of special slogans directed at the West European peoples represents a new tack in Soviet foreign policy, the object of which is to try to alienate Europe from the United States." Mr. Duevel finds a slight change in the slogans addressed to the Vietnam situation. Presumably as a reward for the U.S. discontinuation of the bombings of North Vietnam and the start of "peace" talks in Paris, the old slogan, "Resolutely demand that the United States cease immediately its rapacious aggressive war against the freedom-loving Vietnamese people," has had the adjective "rapacious" deleted for May

Day, 1969 presentation. But in Moscow's eyes we are still fighting an "aggressive" war, and apparently it will be so denominated until we help the Viet Cong form a coalition government in Saigon.

Richard Allen, Nixon's foreign affairs analyst who gave his warning that Czechoslovakia would be invaded, says that Soviet policy won't shift significantly so long as Moscow's domestic institutional arrangements remain what they are. The Radio Liberty-Institute for the Study of the USSR analyses of the May Day slogans bear Mr. Allen out.

Film Releasing Firms

By BOB THOMAS

AP Television-Movie Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — They're called "instant majors." And indeed major film releasing companies seem to spring forth full-grown, lending diversity and competition to the movie market.

Commonwealth United may sound like a savings and loan bank, but it's a new film company with solid backing. Last week the trade papers carried ads announcing some of its new products: "Julius Caesar," Charlton Heston, Jason Robards, John Gielgud, etc.; "Viva Max," Peter Ustinov, Jonathan Winters; "The Magic Christian," Peter Sellers, Ringo Starr; and other important films.

National General used to operate a theater chain, but lately it has branched out in all directions, including a film releasing company. Among its releases: "With Six You Get Egg Roll," Doris Day, Brian Keith; "The Stalking Moon," Gregory Peck, Eva Marie Saint; "April Fool," Jack Lemmon, Catharine Deneuve.

Cinemas formerly made wide-screen spectacles for its own theaters; now it releases movies as well. Among them: "Candy," "The Killing of Sister

George," "Hell in the Pacific," "Charly."

The emergence of these three releasing companies and others like them represents a striking change in film merchandising.

During the Golden Era of the 1930s, the distribution of movies was a tight operation. Everything was controlled by the five majors—Paramount, M.G.M., Fox, RKO, Warner Brothers—three minors—Columbia, Universal, United Artists—with the leftovers handled by Republic and Monogram. In the postwar period, the three minors became majors, RKO and Republic disappeared, and Monogram became Allied Artists. Walt Disney started Buena Vista to release his own films.

Control of film releasing remained in the hands of a few companies. Producers complained about excessive charges for distribution, as well as inability of the companies to merchandise films intended for special audiences.

Nowadays a host of releasing companies can offer the film maker lower distribution fees than those charged by the majors. And there is the promise of special campaigns for films not aimed at the mass market.

JUNE, 1934
35 YEARS AGO
Circleville temperatures reached a new high for June 1, when the thermometer registered 97 degrees.

The Franklin Inn moved to its new location at 108-110 E. Franklin St., between the post office and Court St. It had been located opposite the fire department. Special Sunday dinner menus included fried spring chicken for 35 cents; roast chicken, Virginia baked ham, prime roast of beef or roast pork for 25 cents per dinner.

John G. "Doggy" Ward, E. Union St., announced he would oppose incumbent Charles Radcliff for the Democratic nomination for Pickaway county sheriff.

Sarah Ann Vincent, 17-year old graduate of New Holland high school suffered painful injuries when she fell from a second story window of her home while walking in her sleep.

The Bryan Woods show was booked for Circleville on the vacant lot opposite the Corwin St. school building. It was a presentation of monkeys and baboons. The Lee Brothers 3-ring circus with wild animals and cowboys was presented from Mason's field. An uptown parade preceded the afternoon performance of the circus.

Dr. Howard Jones, Circleville's oldest physician, disputed the words of his friend, a Cleveland surgeon-author who wrote the "humanity faced extinction as a result of the present 'high-speed living'...

Several rides including merry-go-rounds, free acts which included a high dive, acrobats and high wire artists and music for dancing was promised by Ashville Community Club for the village Fourth of July celebration.

All state and federal relief to Pickaway County was ended by the state relief commission who claimed the county improperly diverted relief money to other funds.

Miss Gladys Harris, 412 S. Pickaway St., received the Bachelor of School Music degree at Oberlin College commencement and planned to work toward her masters at Columbia University, New York.

Heavy showers in nearly every part of Pickaway County gave a new ray of hope to the county's drought-stricken farmers. Accompanying strong winds caused considerable damage to property and two horses owned by Richard Hedges of Harrison Twp. were killed by lightning during the storm.

Regimental Gold, chestnut saddle mare owned by Col. E. S. "Ned" Thatcher of Jackson Twp., foaled a chestnut filly by King's Genius, unbeaten saddle stallion owned by Roger Selby of Portsmouth.

NEW YORK (AP) — Estelle Parsons, who says she hates life but loves acting, was stuck in a traffic jam here recently and started singing.

When the startled taxicab driver asked her why, she replied: "Pure despair."

The remark is typical of the ironic philosophy of one of the most interesting performers in show business. She is an odd mixture of aloofness from life and passionate involvement in it.

Estelle, who won an Oscar for her first film, "Bonnie and Clyde," was nominated for another for her second, "Rachel, Rachel." She also has won two Obie awards on off-Broadway plays. In her fourth film, "Strangers," she plays the bitter daughter in an estranged family.

"I like to play people that ordinary people might dislike—to take an unsympathetic role and make it sympathetic," she said. "To develop a little human understanding and compassion, that is what I like to do."

Miss Parsons, whose nickname in college was "Parsley," is a plump, attractive woman with deceptively soft gray-green eyes who doesn't mind at all admitting she is 41.

"I don't feel age has anything to do with my work," she said. "Youth and beauty were never the most important things in my life."

Daughter of a New England lawyer and a Swedish mother, Estelle decided at 4 she wanted to be an actress. Later she thought of a career in political science. After a year in law school, she became at 22 the youngest member of the planning board of Marblehead, Mass.

"I gave up the study of law because I didn't like competing with men," she recalled. "I don't like competition of any kind. I hate to best people. That's what I like about acting. No one else has to be defeated for you to do your job."

She came to New York in 1951 and got a job as a production assistant for NBC television and radio shows at $75 a week. Three years later she was earning $1,000 a week as a commentator, but quit to try to make her mark in the theater.

A five-year marriage to writer Richard Gehman, which ended in divorce, left her with two daughters, Martha and Abbie, and a distaste for further marital adventures.

Miss Parsons has a theory about artists in any field. "Actors need to be actors because they can't live life on its real level," she said. "If artists could live a life fully in relationship with other human beings, they wouldn't need to be artists."

and try to create something which is better than life because it has a form and structure, which life doesn't have."

But for a pessimistic idealist, Estelle is astonishingly congenial. She leaves the impression she would be great fun to be with on the days she didn't prefer to be alone.

We hope millions of Japanese and visiting kids enjoy the El Dorado during the Fair but when that's finished it would be kind of nice if they'd send it back.

Hatlo's They'll Do It Every Time

By JOHN CUNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Some of the nation's critical domestic problems undoubtedly could more easily be solved if people would only stop moving around and let the planners get a handle on things. But that might never happen.

Restlessness has always been a characteristic of Americans who, it must be remembered, got here by moving from the old country, and who once here proceeded to explore a vast 3.6-million square miles of land.

Now, as the offspring of immigrants ascend the economic ladder, it isn't at all uncommon for them to move into a "first home" and then into a larger one and so on as their economic status improves.

America on the move will be clearly in evidence on the nation's highways this summer, when moving vans sometimes will seem common as trailers. One big mover estimates that 18 million Americans will change homes between now and September.

Where is everyone going? From farm to city, for one thing, although that migration is said now to be nearly over after having drained farm population from 30.5 million in 1940 to about 10 million now.

The stronger migration in the past two years or so have been from the core city to the suburb—or as some see it, a migration of white from Negro. This out-migration of whites has increased sharply in the past two years.

Speaking to a House Banking subcommittee, a Census Bureau official estimated that nearly 500,000 whites a year now leave the large cities, compared with only 141,000 a year between 1960 and 1966.

For whatever reasons, American industry is playing a big role in this shifting of population, for industry continues to remove itself from the core city and establish in the nearby suburbs.

This not only has reduced the tax base of the cities—or at least slowed its growth—but it has deprived the cities of some of their most knowledgeable and productive citizens, a fact related to the deterioration of real estate, transportation and job opportunities.

A survey by the National Industrial Conference Board, a private research organization supported largely by business, shows that in one five-year period—from 1958 to 1963—the cities lost 300,000 manufacturing jobs while the suburbs gained 400,000.

The NICB suggest that this trend still continues, although probably at a slower rate. Regardless of how slowly it continues, it represents a population drain on the cities, and very probably this drain is almost all white.

Now the Negro population also is getting the idea and it, too, is moving to the suburbs in increasing numbers. Conrad Taeuber, associate director of the Census Bureau, stated that the rate jumped from 19,000 a year in 1960-1966 to 221,000 a year in 1966-1968.

Nevertheless, because of a high birth rate, the number of Negroes in core cities continues to increase, despite no similar growth in jobs or services or improvements in living conditions.

And so the problem is clear and growing: whites and Negroes separating from each other, manufacturing leaving the city and leaving pockets of unemployment also, and a deteriorating tax base.

Daphne Du Maurier, author of the memorable "Rebecca," is about to launch her seventeenth novel. "Good for her," applauds the Literary Guild's Gene Shalit. "Du Maurier du Maurier." And that superb critic, Walter Kerr, gets into punster territory by titling his new collection of theater essays "Thirty Plays Hath November."

Respectable elders in one resort sector, weary of the wicked ways of local and imported hippies and pot-smokers, have approved an ordinance by the City Commission banning obscenity in books, magazines, and phonograph records. Caskie Stinnett uncovered this hilarious feature of the ordinance: it is so specific in describing acts and language that are banned that the local newspaper didn't dare to reprint it in full!

In response to a query about hippies, Victor Borge answered, "I like only one—and that's my wife. In fact, she's been getting a little TOO hippy lately." (He added, "If my wife sees this, it's goodbye forever.")

At a skating carnival, a spectator enthused, "Sonja Henie looks more beautiful than ever." "She should," agreed Borge. "She's been on ice for years."

Speaking Of Your Health

By Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

We are actively raising funds for a community hospital. One of our trustees recalls a statement or a column you wrote about a community hospital that is an ideal one. How does that one differ from the usual structure we now are considering?

Mr. and Mrs. B. R. T., Tennessee
Dear Mr. and Mrs. T.: I distinctly remember expressing my enthusiasm for a particular community hospital which I had the pleasure of visiting in Waterville, Maine. What impressed me was that it was not a creation of bricks and mortar with canyons of marble and steel. The total structure seemed to have woven in its every fiber, warmth and devotion which radiated from the personnel and even from the architecture.

The kindness, the security and the hope that pervaded the Thayer Hospital are symbols of humanitarian endeavors which should be incorporated in every new community hospital in the country.

The guiding light in the creation of this oasis, far from the so-called sophistication of large communities, was Dr. Frederick T. Hill. This medical and social giant continued his memoirs up to the day he died. Probably the greatest testimonial to him is the fact that the Thayer Community Hospital is constantly aware of the sensitive needs of patients during their time of stress and illness. Dr. Hill had embarked on a program whose object was "to serve with tenderness and skill, all who seek succor."

You would do well to study this community hospital for it is a project that can stand as a beacon of hope for the forlorn, the anxious and the sick. Dr. Hill made his love of mankind the cornerstone of this hospital. It can be duplicated by you. That cornerstone contained endless devotion of man to man.

I have a momentary feeling of dizziness if I make a sudden change of position or if I get up too quickly in the morning. I am 68 years old and am otherwise in good health. Can this mean that I am leading to a stroke or to a brain tumor? Mr. E. S., Kansas

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

Anatole Shub, the Washington Post Moscow correspondent who was recently expelled from Moscow, has revealed that the Soviet Novosti, the agency that handles propaganda, has been selling its "news" to western media executives, at the rate of fifty dollars for a forty-minute talk with a medium-level official. Translated into Washington terms, this is as if Herb Kellin, Nixon's information coordinator, were to let Scotty Reston of the New York Times see Arthur Burns or Daniel Patrick Moynihan for a small fee, meanwhile reserving the choicer "news" for the TV media (which, so Shub says, go as high as $500 in Moscow for a good shot of a new Soviet supersonic airliner).

So you believe the news from the Soviet Union, do you? Better ignore those Moscow datelines and concentrate on such excellent analytical sources as Radio Liberty and the Institute for the Study of the USSR, both of which depend on a fine-tooth-comb monitoring of the Communist media by experts who are at home in all Slavic tongues.

Every year Radio Liberty and the Institute for the Study of the USSR come through with a close inspection and interpretation of the Kremlin's May Day slogans. Last year, at a time when Richard Nixon, as a candidate for U.S. President, was hoping that the Era of Confrontation might give way to the Era of Negotiation, the May Day slogans forecast a much tougher Soviet line. And lo and behold, Russian tanks were soon moving through the Carpathian passes into Czechoslovakia.

The May Day slogans for 1969 are no more reassuring than those of a year ago. As Christian Duevel analyzes them for Radio Liberty, we are in for an intensification of the "current reactionary trend" in Soviet domestic policies.

The cries for "vigilance" addressed to the Russian population echo those of "the worst periods of Stalin's terror." "Equally disturbing," says Mr. Duevel, "is the omission, for the first time in many years, of any slogan calling for a rise in the standard of living or material welfare of the people."

It wasn't so very long ago that we were hearing about "Libermanism," which was Moscow shorthand for socialist experimentation with a return to factory autonomy and a free price system. In Czechoslovakia the Communist liberals took the talk about "Libermanism" seriously, and Ota Sik, the Czech economist, worked up a fine program for cutting industry free from the dead hand of the local party bureaucracy. Alas this has all gone with the wind, both in Prague and in Moscow, says Herman Achminov, in his analysis of the May Day slogans for the Institute for the Study of the USSR. "The demand for profitability in the economy has... finally been dropped from the Central Committee's appeals... the 'economic reform,' which raised such high hopes, has now been watered down out of all recognition, and... orthodox, hard-line Communists have regained the upper hand within the country."

The prospects for a conciliatory Soviet foreign policy toward the U.S. seem also to have gone down the drain. Says Mr. Achminov, "the inclusion of special slogans directed at the West European peoples represents a new tack in Soviet foreign policy, the object of which is to try to alienate Europe from the United States." Mr. Duevel finds a slight change in the slogans addressed to the Vietnam situation. Presumably as a reward for the U.S. discontinuation of the bombings of North Vietnam and the start of "peace" talks in Paris, the old slogan, "Resolutely demand that the United States cease immediately its rapacious aggressive war against the freedom-loving Vietnamese people," has had the adjective "rapacious" deleted for May

Day, 1969 presentation. But in Moscow's eyes we are still fighting an "aggressive" war, and apparently it will be so denominated until we help the Viet Cong form a coalition government in Saigon.

Richard Allen, Nixon's foreign affairs analyst who gave his boss a month's advance warning that Czechoslovakia would be invaded, says that Soviet policy won't shift significantly so long as Moscow's domestic institutional arrangements remain what they are. The Radio Liberty-Institute for the Study of the USSR analyses of the May Day slogans bear Mr. Allen out.

Film Releasing Firms

By BOB THOMAS

AP Television-Movie Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — They're called "instant majors." And indeed major film releasing companies seem to be spring forth full-grown, lending diversity and competition to the movie market.

Commonwealth United may sound like a savings and loan bank, but it's a new film company with solid backing. Last week the trade papers carried ads announcing some of its new product: "Julius Caesar," Charlton Heston, Jason Robards, John Gielgud, etc.; "Viva Max," Peter Ustinov, Jonathan Winters; "The Magic Christian," Peter Sellers, Ringo Starr; and other important films.

National General used to operate a theater chain, but lately it has branched out in all directions, including a film releasing company. Among its releases: "With Six You Get Egg Roll," Doris Day, Brian Keith; "The Stalking Moon," Gregory Peck, Eva Marie Saint; "April Fool," Jack Lemmon, Catharine Deneuve.

Cinema formerly made wide-screen spectacles for its own theaters; now it releases movies as well. Among them: "Candy," "The Killing of Sister

George," "Hell in the Pacific," "Charly."

The emergence of these three releasing companies and others like them represents a striking change in film merchandizing.

During the Golden Era of the 1930s, the distribution of movies was a tight operation. Everything was controlled by the five majors—Paramount, M.G.M., Fox, RKO, Warner Brothers—three minors—Columbia, Universal, United Artists—with the leftovers handled by Republic and Monogram. In the postwar period, the three minors became majors, RKO and Republic disappeared, and Monogram became Allied Artists. Walt Disney started Buena Vista to release his own films.

Control of film releasing remained in the hands of a few companies. Producers complained about excessive charges for distribution, as well as inability of the companies to merchandise films intended for special audiences.

Nowadays a host of releasing companies can offer the film maker lower distribution fees than those charged by the majors. And there is the promise of special campaigns for films not aimed at the mass market.

JUNE, 1924
35 YEARS AGO.
Circleville temperatures reached a new high for June 1, when the thermometer registered 87 degrees.

The Franklin Inn moved to its new location at 108-110 E. Franklin St., between the post office and Court St. It had been located opposite the fire department. Special Sunday dinner menus included fried spring chicken for 35 cents; roast chicken, Virginia baked ham, prime roast of beef or roast pork for 25 cents per dinner.

John G. "Doggy" Ward, E. Union St., announced he would oppose incumbent Charles Radcliff for the Democratic nomination for Pickaway county sheriff.

Sarah Ann Vincent, 17-year-old graduate of New Holland high school suffered painful injuries when she fell from a second story window of her home while walking in her sleep.

The Bryan Woods show was booked for Circleville on the vacant lot opposite the Corwin St. school building. It was a presentation of monkeys and baboons. The Lee Brothers 3-ring circus with wild animals and cowboys was presented from Mason's field. An uptown parade preceded the afternoon performance of the circus.

Dr. Howard Jones, Circleville's oldest physician, disputed the words of his friend, a Cleveland surgeon-author who wrote the "humanity faced extinction as a result of the present 'high-speed living'...

Several rides including merry-go-rounds, free acts which included a high dive, acrobats and high wire artists and music for dancing was promised by Ashville Community Club for the village Fourth of July celebration.

All state and federal relief to Pickaway County was ended by the state relief commission who claimed the county improperly diverted relief money to other funds.

Miss Gladys Harris, 412 S. Pickaway St., received the Bachelor of School Music degree at Oberlin College commencement and planned to work toward her masters at Columbia University, New York.

Heavy showers in nearly every part of Pickaway County gave a new ray of hope to the county's drought-stricken farmers. Accompanying strong winds caused considerable damage to property and two horses owned by Richard Hedges of Harrison Twp. were killed by lightning during the storm.

Regimental Gold, chestnut saddle mare owned by Col. E. S. "Ned" Thatcher of Jackson Twp., foaled a chestnut filly by King's Genius, unbeaten stallion owned by Roger Selby of Portsmouth.

Dear Abby:

By Abigail Van Buren

Every Day Is Mother's Day

DEAR ABBY: I agree with your mother who said to you when you were young, "Don't buy me anything for Mother's Day—I don't need anything."

I am that kind of mother, too, and I'm sure there are many mothers just like me. Mother's Day (like Christmas) has become so commercialized it's lost its meaning. It's "gifts" just because a date was circled on the calendar, and all the ads have urged you to buy this and that for mother on "her" day.

I love spontaneous gifts at odd times which come to me only because one of my children saw something he thought I'd enjoy. Mother's Day hits me all wrong, Abby. It's how you treat your mother every day of the year that really counts.

There is something sad about the mother who is "honored" once a year. Her children buy her a corsage and take her out for Sunday dinner, but she sits and waits a whole year before they do it again.

A MOTHER
DEAR ABBY: That letter from the woman who wrote you that her "mother" never missed an opportunity to remind her that she was adopted, hit a sympathetic note with me because my problem is just the opposite.

We have an adopted daughter who never misses an opportunity to remind us that she is adopted so she's not really related to us.

Abby, we adopted her as a tiny baby, and she has meant the world to us. But we must have failed somewhere along the way because apparently we don't mean very much to her.

We have no grandchildren as yet, but if she marries and has children I am sure she will tell them that they aren't related to us either.

What can we say?
JUST A MOTHER
DEAR MOTHER: You can say that no one picks his relatives—he has to take what he gets, whereas an adopted child is "chosen," so what's so special about being "related"?

DEAR ABBY: I'll bet I wasn't the only ex-wife "served" with a recent column of yours instead of a child support check. You stated that there was a 30 day

"grace" period, and no ex-wife had a legal right to yell until her "ex" was 30 days late with the check.

Until your column appeared my "ex" was only two to three weeks late with his child support checks, but now I'll bet he'll be four.

My "ex" pays "horse support" first at nearby racetracks, and when he can't get there personally, he sends his contribution with the bookie. Bullly for the guy who pays early. I wish mine did.

"HOLES IN THE SHOES IN AKNON"

DEAR HOLES: Sorry about that, but I didn't recommend that all child-supporters wait four weeks. I simply published a letter from a reader who claimed that his lawyer advised him that his "ex" had no legal right to yell until he was 30 days late.

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Both Sides Now"—the girl who went from one affair to another, the average duration being two months, then (even with sex) she lost the fellow. She says she quit that kind of behavior, not because it's immoral, but because it's smart.

Like "Both Sides Now" I had several affairs of short duration but I don't go that route anymore. All I needed was the assurance that "everybody ISN'T doing it." Thank you so much for printing that letter.

Latest Fashion Craze Hits; Line Of Makeup For Bosom

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) —The current craze for nudity in fashion has sparked a whole series of new products ranging from body stockings for the modest to body jewelry for the daring.

And the latest idea in the what-will-they-think-of-next category probably will raise more eyebrows than all the rest put together.

It's makeup for the bosom.

The new line of makeup was introduced Thursday by Kenneth, the hairdresser turned cosmetics entrepreneur. He showed the makeup to 200 fashion editors at the New York Couture Group's fall and winter showings this week.

Kenneth said that although he feels "the human body looks better covered up," the times are against him. "We are going to start to feel more conscious of how we look naked," he said.

The new makeup, called "Nude," comes in three parts: bosom highlighter, to provide "a delicate youthful glow to the skin," cleavage delineator, to give "depth to the bosom," and tip blush, for "a rosy hue."

Women who prefer to concentrate on more substantial fashion fads should keep their eyes out for soft shapes, pleats, long scarves and fringe.

All of these items were evident at the Thursday showing of the Mignon collection designed by Dorothy Farbo.

Miss Farbo couldn't be on hand for the showing, a spokesman explained, because she was busy preparing a collection to present to Mrs. Richard M. Nixon on Tuesday. Mrs. Nixon and her two daughters, Tricia and Julie, have ordered several items from past Mignon collections and are expected to pick silhouettes from the new line as well.

Martha Raye Finds Tryout Worse Than VC

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — Actress-comedienne Martha Raye, who has been under fire in Vietnam and made her first parachute jump at 49, is facing a difficult task in Baltimore these days.

"I think this is harder than facing the VC," she said of her pre-Broadway tryout of "Hello Sucker," a musical based on the life of Texas Guinan, the Prohibition era's "queen of the nightclubs."

With the musical in a state of flux, Miss Raye said, "every show is like opening night."

In her dressing room was a bouquet of roses from a group of Green Berets at the 5th Special Forces camp in Ft. Bragg, N.C. She has been entertaining troops since World War II, and has made many trips to Vietnam.

of the bride, was flower girl. She was dressed in a linen lemon peel colored dress. Ring bearer was Mark Mace, brother of the bride.

David Clary, cousin of the groom, performed the duties of best man. Franklin J. Mace Jr., brother of the bride; Herb Kinnison and Jim Bethel, cousin of the groom, were ushers.

Mrs. Mace selected for her daughter's wedding a gown of turquoise in the sheath style with white lace trim. Mrs. Bethel was attired in a blue and white dress trimmed with white lace. Both mothers wore corsages of cymbidium orchids.

A reception at the Wardell Party Home immediately followed the ceremony. The bride's table was centered with a four tiered cake topped with wedding bells. Scattered daisies and huckleberry foliage encircled the base of the cake and the punch bowls. Each guest was presented with Georgia almonds in netting as a good luck charm.

Hostesses were Miss Sally Minor, Miss Rita Garrett and Miss Sally Long of Circleville, and Miss Lynn Dennis of Clarksburg.

For a wedding trip to Homestead, Fla., the bride was attired in a white dress with navy blue plaid coat with red accessories, and she wore a corsage of red roses.

The new Mrs. Bethel is a graduate of Circleville High School. Mr. Bethel is a graduate of Vinton County Consolidated High School, attended Ohio State University and is presently serving in the United States Air Force.

Special guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Merton Tootle of New Holland, great-aunt and uncle of the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Mace entertained the wedding party with a rehearsal dinner at the Fox Farm in Chillicothe the evening preceding the ceremony.

Latest Fashion Craze Hits; Line Of Makeup For Bosom

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) —The current craze for nudity in fashion has sparked a whole series of new products ranging from body stockings for the modest to body jewelry for the daring.

And the latest idea in the what-will-they-think-of-next category probably will raise more eyebrows than all the rest put together.

It's makeup for the bosom.

The new line of makeup was introduced Thursday by Kenneth, the hairdresser turned cosmetics entrepreneur. He showed the makeup to 200 fashion editors at the New York Couture Group's fall and winter showings this week.

Kenneth said that although he feels "the human body looks better covered up," the times are against him. "We are going to start to feel more conscious of how we look naked," he said.

The new makeup, called "Nude," comes in three parts: bosom highlighter, to provide "a delicate youthful glow to the skin," cleavage delineator, to give "depth to the bosom;" and tip blush, for "a rosy hue."

Women who prefer to concentrate on more substantial fashion fads should keep their eyes out for soft shapes, pleats, long scarves and fringe.

All of these items were evident at the Thursday showing of the Mignon collection designed by Dorothy Farbo.

Miss Farbo couldn't be on hand for the showing, a spokesman explained, because she was busy preparing a collection to present to Mrs. Richard M. Nixon on Tuesday. Mrs. Nixon and her two daughters, Tricia and Julie, have ordered several items from past Mignon collections and are expected to pick silhouettes from the new line as well.

Martha Raye Finds Tryout Worse Than VC

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — Actress-comedienne Martha Raye, who has been under fire in Vietnam and made her first parachute jump at 19, is facing a difficult task in Baltimore these days.

"I think this is harder than facing the VC," she said of her pre-Broadway tryout of "Hello Sucker," a musical based on the life of Texas Guinan, the Prohibition era's "queen of the night-clubs."

With the musical in a state of flux, Miss Raye said, "every show is like opening night."

In her dressing room was a bouquet of roses from a group of Green Berets at the 5th Special Forces camp in Ft. Bragg, N.C. She has been entertaining troops since World War II, and has made many trips to Vietnam.

Paper Trousseau Etiquette Is Important To Brides

Many a modern miss asked to define the words "paper trousseau" may think it refers to paper pop-art dresses and op-art paper plates.

The altar-bound girl, however, knows that it consists of the necessary printed announcements, invitations and writing paper. And that it's important that a bride-elect knows the general ins and outs of paper etiquette.

The engagement can be announced in several ways: personal notes can be handwritten on special stationery to close friends and to relatives. There are many small folded cards with or without a preprinted message that may be sent to other friends and acquaintances. Or, a formal engagement announcement may be engraved or thermographed (a process that closely resembles engraving but is much less costly.)

When showers are given in her honor, the bride-to-be should send thank you notes on her own stationery or use cards with a preprinted message to express her appreciation.

Wedding gifts received before the day of the wedding should be acknowledged promptly on note paper imprinted with the girl's maiden name or her initials. For gifts received after the wedding, the bride should write her expressions of gratitude on informal-folded note paper — imprinted with her new surname, e.g. "Mrs. Thomas E. Smith." Her new letter paper can be folded or in single sheets, but it too should be formally personalized to read "Mrs. Thomas E. Smith."

Traditionally, the wedding invitation was handwritten by someone who specialized in calligraphy. These scribes are a dying breed so engraving or the less costly thermography is now used. Formal invitations should be mailed at least three weeks in advance of the ceremony. Informal wedding invitations may take the form of handwritten notes or telephone calls but there is nothing wrong in sending out formal invitations to a small, informal wedding.

Wedding invitations are issued by the bride's parents, or by either parent alone if one parent has died and the living parent has not remarried. If both parents are deceased, the invitations may be issued by a close relative or friend. In cases where the bride's parents are divorced, the invitation should be issued by the parent with whom she has made her home, even if both parents will be at the wedding.

There are several enclosures that might be needed with the invitations. If only some guests are invited to the reception, a separate reception card, worded to give specific information as to time and place of the reception, is included in the envelope with the invitation. Response cards and printed return envelopes are a help to the bride's parents. At very large weddings in big churches ordinarily filled with sightseers it is sometimes necessary to have church cards. These indicate that the church has been closed to the public for the period of the ceremony and only bearers of the cards will be admitted. Few cards can be sent with the invitation to special friends and relatives who are to be seated in reserved sections of the church.

Wedding announcements, calling cards and at home cards pose many etiquette problems. A survey Williamhouse Regency showed that only 54 per cent of brides-to-be knew the proper etiquette connected with these stationery items.

Wedding announcements, which are mailed immediately after the ceremony, should be sent out to those for whom an invitation is impracticable. Announcements are also mailed if the ceremony is private or after an elopement.

At-home cards announce the couple's new address. These are furnished with plain envelopes for separate mailing after the wedding. They may be enclosed with a wedding announcement.

One item, which is passe as a social requirement but does come in handy, is the calling card. They make delightful gift enclosures and are perfect for exchanging phone numbers. The calling card should always read like this, "Mrs. Thomas E. Smith."

Couples Aid Where Dads Paid

By ARLEEN ABRAHAMS
Associated Press Writer

Many a father of the bride, suffering from the post-wedding day bills blues, has been heard to moan, "I wish they would have eloped. The modern couple need not go that far to provide financial relief to the brides father."

More and more young working couples who want a larger and more elaborate wedding than would be possible while keeping within the brides parents financial means, are paying all or part of the costs traditionally borne by the bride and her family. For example, a couple who wants steak instead of the chicken that the brides budget calls for may elect to pay the price difference themselves. Or if the couple wants more guests, than the bridal budget allows for, they may chip in the additional cash.

Its not unusual — even if Emily Post won't agree — for the groom or the groom's family to assume some expenses traditionally borne by the bride — particularly if the grooms family is considerably wealthier than that of the bride. If the groom himself is financially established, he may wish to foot all the wedding expenses. (In keeping with propriety, however, he should not pay for the more intimate items in his brides trousseau.)

Sometimes, particularly when the bride has no family, the grooms family will make the couple a gift of the entire wedding and get much pleasure by doing so. One mother of a recent groom explained the situation thus: "When my son, a recent college graduate, got engaged he and his fiancée came to us and explained that because of the brides family circumstances — her father was dead and she was sending herself through college — they would be unable to have an elaborate reception unless we helped out. And an elaborate wedding with the works was what they both wanted. We're well able to afford it so we offered to pay for everything. Not only did they get what they wanted, but it made us very happy too; its a gift which will always give us cherishable memories."

Even the formal etiquette books have bent in recent years and now list several expenses that are optional or set by local custom. However, in most cases these so-called optional expenses don't give any financial break to the father of the bride — they only add to his burden. Items in this classification include:

Bride's bouquet, traditionally a gift from the groom, may be purchased by bride's family as part of her outfit.

Bachelor dinner is given by groom in some areas; by his attendants in others.

Rehearsal dinner may be hosted by either the bride's or groom's family.

Bridesmaids' luncheon, usually given by the bride, may be given by the attendants.

Corsages for mothers and grandmothers are usually provided by the groom but the bride may buy those for her own mother and grandmother.

For those who believe in complying with etiquette rules to the letter of the law, here's a traditional, etiquette-sanctioned break-down of other wedding expenses:

Groom or his family pays for:

Bride's engagement and wedding rings, marriage license, clergyman's fee, gifts for best man and ushers; gloves, ties and ascots for men in wedding party, complete wedding trip, wedding gift for bride, lodging for out-of-town ushers.

Bride or her family pays for:

Invitations and her personal stationery, wedding dress, photographers and flowers for church and reception, rental fee for church; fees for organist and soloist, reception, including food, beverages, music, bouquet for maid of honor, bridesmaids, flower girl and gifts for her attendants, groom's wedding ring, transportation of bridal party to church and reception, lodging for out-of-town bridesmaids, gift to the groom.

Maturity, Education, Income Lead To Happy Marriages

Marriage may be just a gamble, as some leap-before-looking persons claim. But even a gambler tries to put his money on the prospect offering the most favorable odds. Since the stakes in the matrimonial sweepstakes are high — loser gets nothing except alimony deductions (or payments) — the smart gambler will look for the closest to a sure thing.

The odds are with you if you're in your 20s, have finished school and earned some money. In addition, if you live in a rural area or suburb, preferably in the Northeast and you're marrying someone about your own age who also finished school and who now, too, earns money regularly, you're better than a 15:1 favorite to achieve stability and wedded bliss.

According to statistics compiled by the Census Bureau of the U.S. Department of Commerce, the three inter-related elements most essential for a stable marriage are mature age, a good education and a steady income.

Age at marriage has a direct bearing on marital stability. Statistics show, for example, that women who marry before the age of 18 are twice as likely to see their marriages end in divorce or separation as those who marry at 18 or 19; and they're three times likelier to fail than those who wait until 22, 23 or 24. With men, the ages run about three years higher — the average age difference found in most couples.

The more education a person gets, the older he tends to be when he marries. Male college graduates — who as a group are the oldest when they first say "I do" — and who tend to marry women approximately their own ages — have the greatest chance for marital success. Conversely, broken marriages occur most often among men with limited education and incomes. Beyond doubt, the Census takers find, the more schooling a man has, the higher his income and the better are his chances for competing for a wife and attaining marriage stability.

At the same time, marriages seem to spur earning power and married men tend to average higher incomes than men who are unmarried.

Another high-ranking factor in the marital sweepstakes is place and type of residence. Generally, it's been found that the more thickly populated the area, the smaller the percentage of stable marriages. Rural communities have more stable marriages than communities elsewhere and stability in marriage diminishes in the following order: suburbs, small cities, large cities.

Some qualifications to this finding should be noted. The percentage of Americans living in rural areas is decreasing, a trend expected to continue. A logical possibility for the high percentage of stable rural marriages is that persons with unstable or broken marriages migrate from rural areas to metropolitan centers.

Broken marriages are most common in the West — particularly among white women. The Northeast offers the most chance of a stable marriage for a white woman — due partly to the presence in this area of many ethnic groups with traditionally low divorce rates and to stringent divorce laws. On the other hand, among non-white women, marital breakups are most likely in the Northeast. On the whole, non-whites have two to three times as many broken marriages as white but whites and non-whites of the same level of schooling have about the same rates of marital breakup.

Although the 1967 divorce rate per 1,000 population reached its highest peak since 1949, the fact remains that most people marry only once. Four out of five women who married about 30 years ago are still in that marriage and among those who married about age 21, nine out of ten are still married to the same man.

Maturity, Education, Income Lead To Happy Marriages

Marriage may be just a gamble, as some leap-before-looking persons claim. But even a gambler tries to put his money on the prospect offering the most favorable odds. Since the stakes in the matrimonial sweepstakes are high — loser gets nothing except alimony deductions (or payments) — the smart gambler will look for the closest to a sure thing.

The odds are with you if you're in your 20s, have finished school and earned some money. In addition, if you live in a rural area or suburb, preferably in the Northeast and you're marrying someone about your own age who also finished school and who now, too, earns money regularly, you're better than a 15:1 favorite to achieve stability and wedded bliss.

According to statistics compiled by the Census Bureau of the U.S. Department of Commerce, the three inter-related elements most essential for a stable marriage are mature age, a good education and a steady income.

Age at marriage has a direct bearing on marital stability. Statistics show, for example, that women who marry before the age of 18 are twice as likely to see their marriages end in divorce or separation as those who marry at 18 or 19; and they're three times likelier to fail than those who wait until 22, 23 or 24. With men, the ages run about three years higher — the average age difference found in most couples.

The more education a person gets, the older he tends to be when he marries. Male college graduates — who as a group are the oldest when they first say "I do" — and who tend to marry women approximately their own ages — have the greatest chance for marital success. Conversely, broken marriages occur most often among men with limited education and incomes. Beyond doubt, the Census takers find, the more schooling a man has, the higher his income and the better are his chances for competing for a wife and attaining marriage stability.

At the same time, marriages seem to spur earning power and married men tend to average higher incomes than men who are unmarried.

Another high-ranking factor in the marital sweepstakes is place and type of residence. Generally, it's been found that the more thickly populated the area, the smaller the percentage of stable marriages. Rural communities have more stable marriages than communities elsewhere and stability in marriage diminishes in the following order: suburbs, small cities, large cities.

Some qualifications to this finding should be noted. The percentage of Americans living in rural areas is decreasing, a trend expected to continue. A logical possibility for the high percentage of stable rural marriages is that persons with unstable or broken marriages migrate from rural areas to metropolitan centers.

Broken marriages are most common in the West — particularly among white women.

The Northeast offers the most chance of a stable marriage for a white woman — due partly to the presence in this area of many ethnic groups with traditionally low divorce rates and to stringent divorce laws. On the other hand, among non-white women, marital breakups are most likely in the Northeast. On the whole, non-whites have two to three times as many broken marriages as white but whites and non-whites of the same level of schooling have about the same rates of marital breakup.

Although the 1967 divorce rate per 1,000 population reached its highest peak since 1949, the fact remains that most people marry only once. Four out of five women who married about 30 years ago are still in that marriage and among those who married about age 21, nine out of ten are still married to the same man.

Happy Thoughts Make Portrait

"I've never taken a bad picture of a bride," says bridal fashion photographer Larry Gordon.

Gordon isn't boasting about his talent; he's simply pointing up the fact that when a girl gets into a bridal gown, something inside her lights up.

"The photographer has only to capture that look," as Gordon remarks.

This doesn't mean, however, that all a girl has to do is sit back and presto—a beautiful portrait. Actually, there are many things a girl can do to insure better photographs starting from the first picture-taking session—the engagement photo.

Most girls try to glamorize themselves for the engagement photo, Gordon says. They go to the hairdressers; then to the sitting. Instead he advises a girl to have her hair done a day or two before the engagement photo is taken so that the hair looks natural. The same goes for makeup—natural street makeup is the rule. When posing a girl should keep happy thoughts in her mind. "Pay attention to the photographer but the happy thoughts—that is what will reflect in the picture," he adds.

As soon as she has the wedding dress in hand, Gordon urges the bride to make an appointment for the bridal portrait. This gives the photographer time to retouch the photo.

The bridal portrait requires a complete makeup job as opposed to the regular street makeup worn for the engagement photo. Brides should use a light based makeup, even if they're tan, and the base should be worked down into the neck and into all visible areas so that the skin color appears even. If a bride uses a dark base, he explains, the contrast between the light gown and the dark complexion makes for a poor picture.

Gordon cautions a girl to handle the makeup accents lightly because "when a girl is in a gown and a veil, any accented features show up more intensely than if she were in street clothes."

A bride should realize that photos

add 15 per cent in weight to a girl's normal appearance, says Gordon. Therefore, if you have a tendency to look heavy, it's important that a girl learn to shade her face to bring out the best angle. For example, a jawbone covered with a base two shades darker than the regular base, will look less imposing. Shading below the eyes with a lighter color will accentuate the eyes.

After putting on her makeup, a girl should study herself in the mirror and select the look she wishes to convey. The photographer will direct her, acknowledges Gordon, but the girl herself is often the best guide to what will be the best pose.

The bride's last encounter with the photographer comes on the wedding day. On this occasion, he says, it is the ceremony that is most important photographically speaking—rather than the bride herself.

Although Gordon notes that there are photo restrictions in some churches and synagogues—such as no flash—he comments that with telephoto lenses and available light there is no reason why a photographer would have to disturb the ceremony in any way. Just in case, however, he advises the bride to work out any photo restrictions with her clergyman before the ceremony.

HURRY UP and RELAX

Highways, superhighways, turnpikes, freeways, expressways—they crisscross America, leading in every imaginable direction. And, they get you there so fast, you are past the right exit before you know it. We live in such a speed-oriented world that, when we are not working, we feel we must "hurry up and relax." At times we even feel guilty when we are not busy about something.

We don't really like our foolish pace. We speak longingly of peace of mind and quietude, and we take tranquilizers by the ton. We search frantically... on vacations, on "lost weekends," on "fun activities"... but tranquility is hard to find.

Perhaps we are seeking too hard. Perhaps tranquility is not to be sought. Rather, isn't it what happens when you are at peace with yourself, no matter the circumstances?

You can be at peace with yourself only when you are at peace with God. He is the very center of your being, and His peace is freely given when you accept it.

Accept this great gift of God in the very best place of all—His Church.

Drug To Fight Common Cold Showing Signs Of Progress

How Weather Looks Today

OHIO WEATHER SUMMARY

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Official Weather Bureau summary for Ohio:

The major weather factor for the state continues to be a cold front which was located from west to east across northern Ohio early today.

This front will continue slowly southward, and reaching the central portion of the state early this afternoon.

It will move south of the Ohio River by late this evening.

Showers and scattered thunderstorms will develop as this cold front slides slowly southward. The shower and thunderstorm activity will end in northern Ohio this afternoon, in central Ohio tonight and extreme southern Ohio Saturday morning.

Thursday's rainfall was confined to the northern portion of the state with some heavy amounts reported in the Cleveland area. Cleveland itself measured .60 inches of rain Thursday evening.

Elsewhere in northern Ohio, official rainfall measurements were reported as light.

A decided change to cooler will take place over all of the state by late tonight. Lows will range from the lower 50s extreme north to the lower 60s in extreme southern Ohio.

The forecast for Saturday is mostly sunny and cool Sunday's outlook shows increasing cloudiness with a chance of showers.

— FORECASTS —

OHIO — Showers and scattered thunderstorms ending followed by partly cloudy and cooler north by evening, in central tonight and extreme south Saturday morning. Lows tonight from the low 50s north to the low or mid 50s extreme south. Partly cloudy and cooler Saturday.

NORTHWEST AND NORTHEAST OHIO — Variable cloudiness and cooler with showers and scattered thunderstorms ending this afternoon or evening. Partly cloudy and cooler later tonight and Saturday. Low tonight in the lower 50s. Highs Saturday in the mid to upper 60s. Outlook Sunday: Mostly cloudy and mild with a chance of showers.

EAST CENTRAL OHIO AND CENTRAL OHIO — Variable cloudiness and cooler with showers ending tonight. Lows in the mid 50s. Partly cloudy and cooler Saturday. Highs in the upper 60s to the lower 70s. Outlook Sunday: Mostly cloudy and mild with a chance of showers.

SOUTHWEST & SOUTHEAST OHIO — Mostly cloudy and warm with showers and scattered thunderstorms likely tonight. Lows in the upper 50s to the lower 60s. Variable cloudiness and cooler Saturday with showers ending. Highs in the mid to upper 70s. Outlook Sunday: Mostly cloudy and mild with a chance of showers.

of its limits and the large doses needed, may not prove useful in man, a researcher said, but it represents "a step in the right direction."

Dr. Elliot C. Dick of the University of Wisconsin Medical School said he believed this was the first report of even limited effectiveness of a drug to combat colds in man.

The development of the drug was described by Dr. John J. Boyle of Smith, Kline & French Laboratories of Philadelphia at a conference on antiviral substances sponsored by the New York Academy of Sciences.

Several clinical research teams have been investigating the drug with human volunteers to see how it works on half a dozen types of rhinoviruses, the largest group of cold bugs.

Dick and Dr. Donn J. D'Alessio of Wisconsin have completed a study of 41 volunteers given three grams daily of the drug—called SK&K 30097—for seven days.

The number of persons who became ill after inhaling a large dose of rhinovirus was reduced. Those who caught colds were sick for shorter periods than persons who did not get the drug.

Interest has turned to drug remedies for the common cold because there are too many viruses causing colds to develop a vaccine or a few vaccines that would be effective against all of them.

There are more than 100 viruses known to cause colds in man.

Aussie Tells Of Rescuing U.S. Sailors

SUBIC BAY, Philippines (AP) — Australian sailors were so upset when they failed to rescue three American crewmen of the destroyer Frank E. Evans they required "a bit of sedation," their captain testified Thursday.

Capt. John P. Stevenson of the Australian aircraft carrier Melbourne described the last moments of the three Americans after the Evans was sliced in half by the Melbourne during war games in the South China Sea.

He told the U.S.-Australian board of inquiry investigating the June 3 collision the three sailors were the only Americans sighted alive but not saved after the predawn collision. Seventy-four Evans crewmen died.

Stevenson said the three men were on the bow section of the Evans and were sucked under when it sank within minutes of the collision.

The captain said rescue operations conducted by his crew were "absolutely thorough... the boats were in the water in a matter of minutes. I pushed the button myself which released the extra emergency life rafts and buoys."

Before the search was called off 199 Evans crewmen were rescued. Stevenson said: "I don't think anybody was missed."

An Australian seaman who relayed messages just before the collision changed his testimony today about which ship first signaled the other it was going to turn.

Christopher Stevens, 22, originally testified the Evans first signaled it was turning after Stevenson signaled, "You're on collision."

Today he said Stevenson told him: "Tell Evans my rudder is hard left," and this was followed 30 seconds later by a signal from the destroyer: "Roger, my rudder hard right." The two vessels collided "almost immediately" after that, he said.

The young seaman said he changed his testimony because "last night I was reading the papers... and suddenly it just clicked in my head."

Water Skier Pulled By Truck

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The water skier surprised Mrs. Gerald Hicks, but not as much as the pickup truck doing the towing.

The unusual hookup went zip ping past the Hicks home when knee-deep water sloshed across Lehi Drive after a storm in suburban Granger.

"They were having a ball," said Mrs. Hicks. "Except, they had to slow down once in a while for the kayaks."

Ohio State Patrol Cites Mario Andreotti

LONDON, Ohio (AP) — Mario Andreotti, who won the Indianapolis 500 Memorial Day, received further recognition for his fast driving here June 11. But it cost him $25.

Andreotti, who gave a Nazareth, Pa., address, was ticketed by the Ohio Highway Patrol for driving 70 in a 60 mile-per-hour zone on U.S. 40 near here. He failed to appear Thursday in Madison County Court there and forfeited $25 bond.

Ohio Solons Admit Session No Barn-Burner

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The 108th General Assembly has cost Ohio taxpayers nearly $3 million thus far and legislators will be the first to admit they have done little for the money.

Fifty-two bills have been signed into law by the governor. A spot check of the lawmakers failed to produce one who could recall a major piece of legislation in the batch.

A resolution calling for lowering the voting age to 19 years was among the measures. It puts the issue before the voters in November.

Many of those who voted for it on the floor say they will vote against it in the privacy of a voting booth.

Another bill with some substance was vetoed by Gov. James A. Rhodes. It would have permitted use of the Highway Patrol in local disorders.

Although Rhodes initiated the bill, he vetoed it because of an amendment that would have forbidden the patrol's use in labor disputes.

Rhodes feared the bill as

Drunks Take Police Time

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio police agencies spend about one-third of their time handling drunks, according to a report issued Thursday by Battelle Memorial Institute.

The report, based on a survey of 1967 police and court records, showed that public drunkenness and closely related offenses accounted for nearly 118,000 arrests that year.

Cost to state and local governments for arresting, trying and jailing individuals for intoxication and related offenses totaled an estimated $7 million, the report said.

That was about 3 per cent of the total law enforcement budgets in the state in 1967.

The study was conducted under the auspices of the Ohio Department of Health and with the endorsement of the Ohio Crime Commission.

amended would have prohibited him from using the patrol at the Ohio Penitentiary if guards should go on strike.

Of the 52 bills signed, most of them are referred to by Statehouse regulars as "dogs and cats." Interest in them is limited.

They include such things as correcting errors in the code, removing obsolete language in license plate statutes and authorizing Logan County commissioners to pay certain bills.

The "silly season" of a political campaign usually comes a couple months before election when the candidate is tired, newsmen are bored and the public acts if it has heard it all before.

This is when some little incident, usually of no major consequence, happens to embarrass the politician. Reporters jump on it.

The silly season came early for Atty. Gen. Paul W. Brown, an all-but-announced candidate for governor, when he appeared before the county commissioners convention in Cleveland Wednesday.

An aide passed out copies of Brown's speech. Tacked to it was a list of topics he should avoid. Among them was listed the Anti-Ballistics Missile system.

What interest county commissioners may have in the ABM is an open topic for discussion.

Democrats are finding badges that fit almost every new turn of the Republican administration.

When Life magazine made charges of wrong-doing against Gov. Rhodes, they found badges plugging a movie inscribed "Hello Life, Goodbye Columbus."

When GOP legislative leaders announced they would reluctantly go for a permissive county income tax at the governor's prodding, Democrats came up with a new one.

It read simply: "Button Your Wallets!" But they had some members on the Republican side of the aisle who didn't mind wearing the latest one.

Several GOP legislators do not like the tax program either. And by wearing the badges they're letting the administration get the message.

OPEN LETTER

June 16, 1969

Dear Mr. Myers:

It strikes me funny that you would write to Congressman Dent on the record of UE and Communism. Mr. Dent comes from a small town in Pennsylvania, where the UE has some Labor Activity.

I ask you, "Why you did not write to your Congressman right here in Ohio?"

Better yet I will give you a copy of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts report of the Special Commission who investigated the United Electrical and Radio Machine Workers of America.

In their report you will read where the Communist influences and policies dominate the National Organization. The complete evidence before the Commission revealed the exact pattern by which the UE had come under effective Communist Party control —

1. Securing Communist Dominations at the top.
2. Placing willing, pliable and subservient non-Communist front men in positions of seeming authority.
3. Spot placing active Communists in a limited number of key posts down the line.
4. The use of Union newspapers and other means of communications for Communist purposes.
5. The use of the Union name to back and further Communist propaganda and Communist causes.
6. The drawing of Union funds for Communist purposes.
7. A vicious crack-down on any one who raises the issue of Communism within the Union.

This you will find on Page 10 of the Commission's report.

The Rev. Francis J. McDonnell of Boston, issued a statement that any man who came to see him, that in conscience they could not vote for the UE because of its long history of being Communist dominated.

Also I read in this report where Bridgeport, Connecticut Local of the UE expelled twenty-six (26) members of the Local because of their Communist Party affiliations, and the Local was immediately and illegally expelled by the Executive Committee of the National Organization.

The Report detailed the manner in which the Communist Party has dominated and directed the affairs of the UE.

I think you should take one hour of your time to go to the library in Circleville, Ohio and read the book "A History of American Labor", pages 408-420 and 430, and make up your own mind.

In the future I will show you page after page of news in newspapers in regard to the UE.

Thanking you, I remain

Sincerely and Fraternally

Drug To Fight Common Cold Showing Signs Of Progress

NEW YORK (AP) — Scientists have reported that a new drug has shown some limited effectiveness against a few of the viruses that cause the common cold.

How Weather Looks Today

OHIO WEATHER SUMMARY

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Official Weather Bureau summary for Ohio:

The major weather factor for the state continues to be a cold front which was located from west to east across northern Ohio early today.

This front will continue slowly southward, and reaching the central portion of the state early this afternoon.

It will move south of the Ohio River by late this evening.

Showers and scattered thunderstorms will develop as this cold front slides slowly southward. The shower and thunderstorm activity will end in northern Ohio this afternoon, in central Ohio tonight and extreme southern Ohio Saturday morning.

Thursday's rainfall was confined to the northern portion of the state with some heavy amounts reported in the Cleveland area. Cleveland itself measured .60 inches of rain Thursday evening.

Elsewhere in northern Ohio, official rainfall measurements were reported as light.

A decided change to cooler will take place over all of the state by late tonight. Lows will range from the lower 50s extreme north to the lower 60s in extreme southern Ohio.

The forecast for Saturday is mostly sunny and cool Sunday's outlook shows increasing cloudiness with a chance of showers.

— FORECASTS —

OHIO — Showers and scattered thunderstorms ending followed by partly cloudy and cooler north by evening, in central tonight and extreme south Saturday morning. Lows tonight from the low 50s north to the low or mid 50s extreme south. Partly cloudy and cooler Saturday.

NORTHWEST AND NORTHEAST OHIO — Variable cloudiness and cooler with showers and scattered thunderstorms ending this afternoon or evening. Partly cloudy and cooler later tonight and Saturday. Low tonight in the lower 50s. Highs Saturday in the mid to upper 60s. Outlook Sunday: Mostly cloudy and mild with a chance of showers.

EAST CENTRAL OHIO AND CENTRAL OHIO — Variable cloudiness and cooler with showers ending tonight. Lows in the mid 50s. Partly cloudy and cooler Saturday. Highs in the upper 60s to the lower 70s. Outlook Sunday: Mostly cloudy and mild with a chance of showers.

SOUTHWEST & SOUTHEAST OHIO — Mostly cloudy and warm with showers and scattered thunderstorms likely tonight. Lows in the upper 50s to the lower 60s. Variable cloudiness and cooler Saturday with showers ending. Highs in the mid to upper 70s. Outlook Sunday: Mostly cloudy and mild with a chance of showers.

of its limits and the large doses needed, may not prove useful in man, a researcher said, but it represents "a step in the right direction."

Dr. Elliot C. Dick of the University of Wisconsin Medical School said he believed this was the first report of even limited effectiveness of a drug to combat colds in man.

The development of the drug was described by Dr. John J. Boyle of Smith, Kline & French Laboratories of Philadelphia at a conference on antiviral substances sponsored by the New York Academy of Sciences.

Several clinical research teams have been investigating the drug with human volunteers to see how it works on half a dozen types of rhinoviruses, the largest group of cold bugs.

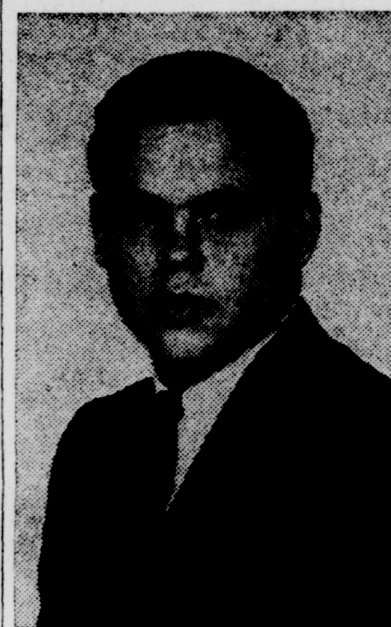

Dick and Dr. Donn J. D'Alessio of Wisconsin have completed a study of 41 volunteers given three grams daily of the drug—called SK&K 30097—for seven days.

The number of persons who became ill after inhaling a large dose of rhinovirus was reduced. Those who caught colds were sick for shorter periods than persons who did not get the drug.

Interest has turned to drug remedies for the common cold because there are too many viruses causing colds to develop a vaccine or a few vaccines that would be effective against all of them.

There are more than 100 viruses known to cause colds in man.

Aussie Tells Of Rescuing U.S. Sailors

SUBIC BAY, Philippines (AP) — Australian sailors were so upset when they failed to rescue three American crewmen of the destroyer Frank E. Evans they required "a bit of sedation," their captain testified Thursday.

Capt. John P. Stevenson of the Australian aircraft carrier Melbourne described the last moments of the three Americans after the Evans was sliced in half by the Melbourne during war games in the South China Sea.

He told the U.S.-Australian board of inquiry investigating the June 3 collision the three sailors were the only Americans sighted alive but not saved after the predawn collision. Seventy-four Evans crewmen died.

Stevenson said the three men were on the bow section of the Evans and were sucked under when it sank within minutes of the collision.

The captain said rescue operations conducted by his crew were "absolutely thorough ... the boats were in the water in a matter of minutes. I pushed the button myself which released the extra emergency life rafts and buoys."

Before the search was called off 199 Evans crewmen were rescued. Stevenson said: "I don't think anybody was missed."

An Australian seaman who relayed messages just before the collision changed his testimony today about which ship first signaled the other it was going to turn.

Christopher Stevens, 22, originally testified the Evans first signaled it was turning after Stevenson signaled, "You're on collision."

Today he said Stevenson told him: "Tell Evans my rudder is hard left," and this was followed 30 seconds later by a signal from the destroyer: "Roger, my rudder hard right." The two vessels collided "almost immediately" after that, he said.

The young seaman said he changed his testimony because "last night I was reading the papers ... and suddenly it just clicked in my head."

Water Skier Pulled By Truck

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The water skier surprised Mrs. Gerald Hicks, but not as much as the pickup truck doing the towing.

The unusual hookup went zip ping past the Hicks home when knee-deep water sloshed across Lehi Drive after a storm in suburban Granger.

"They were having a ball," said Mrs. Hicks. "Except, they had to slow down once in a while for the kayaks."

Ohio State Patrol Cites Mario Andretti

LONDON, Ohio (AP)—Mario Andretti, who won the Indianapolis 500 Memorial Day, received further recognition for his fast driving here June 11. But it cost him $25.

Andretti, who gave a Nazar-eth, Pa., address, was ticketed by the Ohio Highway Patrol for driving 70 in a 60 mile-per-hour zone on U.S. 40 near here. He failed to appear Thursday in Madison County Court there and forfeited $25 bond.

Ohio Solons Admit Session No Barn-Burner

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The 108th General Assembly has cost Ohio taxpayers nearly $3 million thus far and legislators will be the first to admit they have done little for the money.

Fifty-two bills have been signed into law by the governor. A spot check of the lawmakers failed to produce one who could recall a major piece of legislation in the batch.

A resolution calling for lowering the voting age to 19 years was among the measures. It puts the issue before the voters in November.

Many of those who voted for it on the floor say they will vote against it in the privacy of a voting booth.

Another bill with some substance was vetoed by Gov. James A. Rhodes. It would have permitted use of the Highway Patrol in local disorders.

Although Rhodes initiated the bill, he vetoed it because of an amendment that would have forbidden the patrol's use in labor disputes.

Rhodes feared the bill as amended would have prohibited him from using the patrol at the Ohio Penitentiary if guards should go on strike.

Of the 52 bills signed, most of them are referred to by Statehouse regulars as "dogs and cats." Interest in them is limited.

They include such things as correcting errors in the code, removing obsolete language in license plate statutes and authorizing Logan County commissioners to pay certain bills.

The "silly season" of a political campaign usually comes a couple months before election when the candidate is tired, newsmen are bored and the public acts as if it has heard it all before.

This is when some little incident, usually of no major consequence, happens to embarrass the politician. Reporters jump on it.

The silly season came early for Atty. Gen. Paul W. Brown, an all-but-announced candidate for governor, when he appeared before the county commissioners convention in Cleveland Wednesday.

An aide passed out copies of Brown's speech. Tacked to it was a list of topics he should avoid. Among them was listed the Anti-Ballistics Missile system.

What interest county commissioners may have in the ABM is an open topic for discussion.

Democrats are finding badges that fit almost every new turn of the Republican administration.

When Life magazine made charges of wrong-doing against Gov. Rhodes, they found badges plugging a movie inscribed "Hello Life, Goodbye Columbus."

When GOP legislative leaders announced they would reluctantly go for a permissive county income tax at the governor's prodding, Democrats came up with a new one.

It read simply: "Button Your Wallets!" But they had some members on the Republican side of the aisle who didn't mind wearing the latest one.

Several GOP legislators do not like the tax program either. And by wearing the badges they're letting the administration get the message.

Drunks Take Police Time

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio police agencies spend about one-third of their time handling drunks, according to a report issued Thursday by Battelle Memorial Institute.

The report, based on a survey of 1967 police and court records, showed that public drunkenness and closely related offenses accounted for nearly 118,000 arrests that year.

Cost to state and local governments for arresting, trying and jailing individuals for intoxication and related offenses totaled an estimated $7 million, the report said.

That was about 3 per cent of the total law enforcement budgets in the state in 1967.

The study was conducted under the auspices of the Ohio Department of Health and with the endorsement of the Ohio Crime Commission.

Reams Says Demos Need Good Candidates

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Ohio Democrats urgently need "viable candidates at all levels," according to Frazier Reams Jr., the party's unsuccessful candidate for governor three years ago.

Reams, addressing the opening session of the University of Toledo's Robert A. Taft Institute of Government here Thursday, said the party also needs "financial support in order to field these candidates."

Policeman Mum On Tip

DAYTON, Ohio (AP)—Jefferson Township Police Sgt. Thomas M. Spiller faces an indefinite jail term unless he divulges the source of a tip that led to the arrest of radio's famous "Dr. I. Q."

Common Pleas Judge Robert U. Martin Thursday ordered Spiller to name the tipster by June 27 or go to jail.

James Wesley McClain, who for years presided over the popular radio show and now resides in nearby Centerville, was arrested on the western outskirts of Dayton last November after quantities of marijuana and lewd films were found in his car.

Township police said they stopped McClain's car after receiving a tip that the car containing the drugs and film would be passing through the area.

McClain has contended that he was framed. And Montgomery County Prosecutor Lee C. Falke has indicated that he believes that the material may have been planted in the car.

Reds Edge Past Giants, 8-7; Making Rose A Prophet

San Francisco Faces Atlanta Braves Tonight

ATLANTA (AP)—There'll be no rest for the shell-shocked San Francisco Giants' pitching staff when it opens a four-game series with the powerful Braves tonight.

Giants' pitching, particularly the relief, was blasted for 27 runs and 47 hits by the sizzling Cincinnati Reds in a four-game series at Candlestick Park—and that's not including Juan Marichal's five-hit shutout Tuesday. Cincinnati pounded 16 hits in an 8-7 victory Thursday, winning its third game of the series and making prophets of the Reds' Pete Rose and the Giants' Willie McCovey in the free-swinging contest.

Following the Reds' 11-2 romp Wednesday, Rose explained Cincinnati's success: "We've been having pitching problems so if the other team scores seven runs, we've got to go out and score eight."

McCovey, facing a four-man outfield shift throughout the series, pointed out: "No shift will work if I knock the ball out of the park, unless they stack the outfielders on top of each other."

Both players were correct Thursday—Rose predicting the exact outcome as Tommy Helms' ninth-inning double snapped a 7-7 tie, and McCovey blasting a two-run homer against the shift to give the Giants a 6-3 lead after seven innings.

McCovey, possibly hoping to face a conventional defense, takes a league-leading 22 homers into the Atlanta series. The big first baseman also had a run-scoring single, giving him 54 runs batted in.

Right-hander Gaylord Perry, gunning for his 10th victory, was betrayed in the eighth when third baseman Jim Davenport bobbled Tony Perez' grounder with one out.

Darrell Chaney walked, and pinch-batter Fred Whitfield cracked a run-scoring single to right. Chaney was tagged out going to third on the play, but Rose singled and Bob Tolán tagged a three-run homer for a 7-6 lead.

Phil Roll was the big hitter for the game. He connected for a home run in the third inning. The only other extra baser was scored by the Elks' Randy Cradlebaugh. He had a double.

Tom England started on the mound for the Herald allowing three hits, one walk and striking out three. Doug Radabaugh took over the job at the end of the second inning and gave up four hits and three bases on balls while striking out three batters.

President Roots, But Senators Lose, 2-0

Richard Nixon was the people's choice in 1968 but he's not lining up bipartisan support from a certain group of Washington Senators in 1969.

The President showed up at Robert F. Kennedy Stadium with daughter Julie and son-in-law David Eisenhower Thursday night, just in time to see the baseball-playing Senators blow a 2-0 decision to the red-hot Baltimore Orioles.

It was Mr. Nixon's third trip to the ballpark to root, root, root for the home team and the third time he's struck out. That might be party politics, as far as Bob Short, owner of the Senators and treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, is concerned, but it's no way to treat a loyal supporter like Manager Ted Williams, who voted for Mr. Nixon last November.

In other American League activity, the Boston Red Sox blanked Cleveland 3-0, the New York Yankees downed Detroit 5-3, Minnesota flattened California 8-1 and the Chicago White Sox outlasted Seattle 13-10. Kansas City and Oakland were not scheduled.

President Nixon was delayed in leaving for the ballpark by a news conference and didn't get there until the eighth inning. Jim Hannan had blanked the Orioles for seven innings but tired and gave way to Dennis Higgins to start the eighth.

Higgins was in hot water immediately. Don Buford doubled, Paul Blair beat out a bunt and slugging Frank Robinson was advancing to the bat, which was bad enough. Then the President made his entrance.

Home plate umpire John Flaherty held up the game until Mr. Nixon's party was seated. Williams ordered his infield to play back and Robinson pounded into a double play as Buford scored.

That was all Dave McNally needed as he hurled a two-hitter for his 10th victory and the Orioles' seventh in a row. Baltimore pushed across an insurance run in the ninth on Brooks Robinson's double, a wild pitch and Dave Johnson's sacrifice fly.

McNally yielded only leadoff singles to Tim Cullen in the third and Paul Casanova in the ninth.

"The President was really pulling hard for us," reported Short, who sat in the presidential box. "He told me, 'You've got to win this one.' He was really cheering and said he hoped Frank Howard would get up in the ninth. He felt pretty bad that we couldn't win with him here."

Boston's Ray Culp also hurled a two-hitter against Cleveland as he halted a skid which had seen the Red Sox lose five of six games. A two-run homer in the first by Carl Yastrzemski, his 19th, helped Culp to his 10th victory.

The right-hander yielded only a pair of pinch singles, by Lou Klimchick in the third and Lee Maye in the fifth. The game was delayed by rain after the second and fourth innings.

Detroit pitcher Earl Wilson's throwing error on Jerry Kenney's high bouncer in the second inning allowed three runs to score as the Yankees tripped the Tigers. Gene Michael and Jake Gibbs, who singled, all scampered across the plate as Wilson's hurried throw skipped past first baseman Norm Cash. Stan Bahnsen, 4-9, went the route for New York. Dick Mc-

Auliffe homered in the ninth for Detroit's final run.

Minnesota's Dick Woodson, helped by five unearned runs, limited California to three hits and pitched the Twins to within two percentage points of Oakland in the AL West. Jim Fregosi's fifth homer was the only damaging blow off the rookie right-hander.

The White Sox got three runs on a freak play to turn back Seattle. They had just tied the seventh and had the bases loaded with one out. Reliever Bob Locker uncorked a wild pitch as the go-ahead run crossed and when catcher Gerry McNetney's return throw sailed into right field the other two runners also scored.

Carlos May and Bill Melton homered for the Sox while McNetney had a homer and five runs batted in for the Pilots.

Kuhn Moves To Break Up Baseball Gambling Ties

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn has moved to force a breakup of ties between two major league teams and Las Vegas casinos.

A formal announcement of Kuhn's action was set here today after a month's probe of stock holdings in the gambling business by top officials of the Atlanta Braves and Oakland Athletics.

Delbert W. Coleman, chairman of Parvin-Dohrmann Co., which owns three hotels and casinos, is slated to bow out as a director of the Braves, officials disclosed Thursday.

Three other baseball figures — Braves President William C. Bartholomay, Braves Director John J. Louis Jr., and Oakland owner, Charles O. Finley — will stay in the sport, but are expected to scrap their ties with Parvin-Dohrmann.

Kuhn's move came while pro football is also entangled in a controversy over Commissioner Pete Rozelle's demand that New York Jets quarterback Joe Namath sell a bar allegedly used by gamblers. Namath vowed to retire from football instead.

Baseball traditionally has frowned on any ties with gambling since a World Series scandal in 1919.

Coleman, reached in New York, said the owners had volunteered to end the double duty by three Braves executives on the boards of directors of both the club and Parvin-Dohrmann.

Coleman, while quitting the baseball board, will keep his estimated $18 million in stock in Parvin-Dohrmann, which owns the Stardust, Fremont and Aladdin casinos in Las Vegas. Coleman owns another firm which leases and operates two of the casinos.

Bartholomay and Louis are slated to resign from the Parvin-Dohrmann board, officials said.

Top Finalists In MAC Golf Clash Today

MANSFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Two Ohioans who live 20 miles apart emerged today as the top two finalists in the 11th annual Mid-America Junior Open Golf Tournament.

Steve Groves of Lancaster and Greg Poston of Logan were to decide the title in a 36-hole championship match over the 6,200-yard Possum Run course.

Groves moved into the finals with a 4 and 3 win Thursday over Doug Mowery of Oak Park, Mich. Poston defeated Neil Gerhart of Lexington, Ohio, 1-up with a birdie 4 on the 18th hole.

Groves, a semifinalist last year, was 16-over-par for 96 holes of match play, while Poston, who will be a sophomore at Miami University at Oxford, was 5-over-par for 99 holes.

Finals also were set today in four other tournament flights that began with 249 boys from seven states competing.

Two of the matches pitted Rick Zollinger of Columbus against Jim Marko of Mayfield Heights, and Bob Hackett of Hockessin, Del., against Denny Davis of Findlay. Contenders in the other two flights remained to be decided in semifinal play earlier in the day.

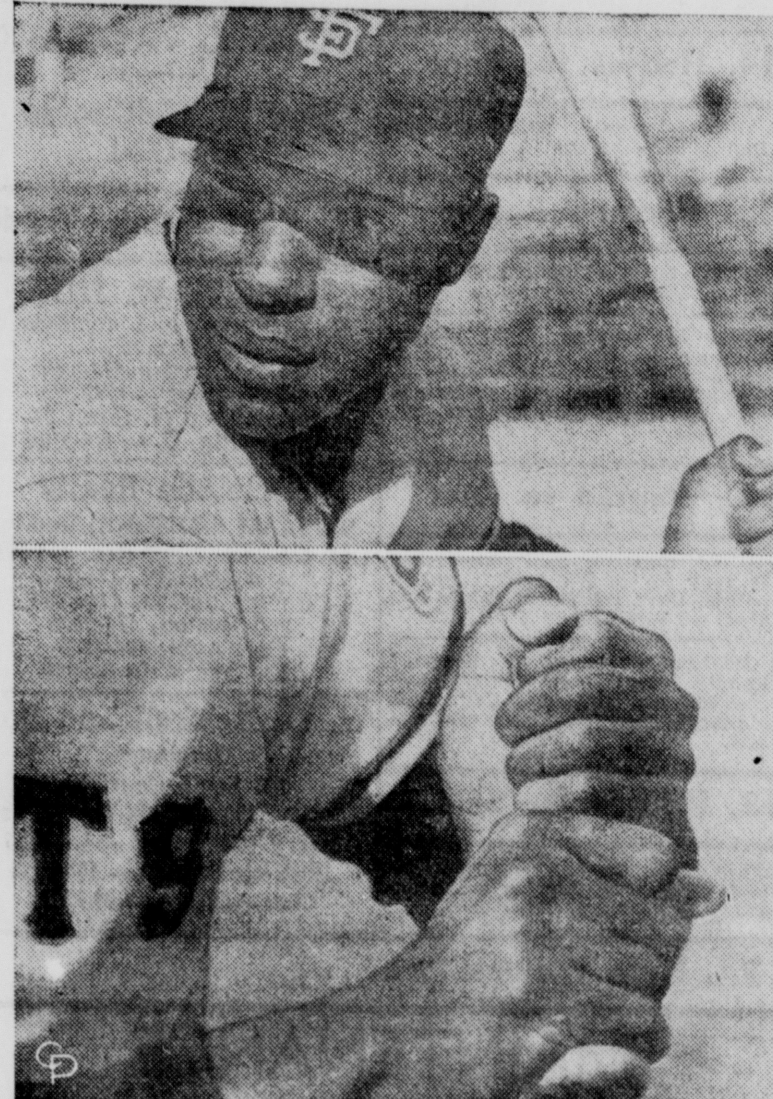

In quarterfinals Thursday, Mowery downed Garry Murray of Jackson 5 and 4. Groves defeated Tod Crandall of Ashtabula 2 and 1. Gerhart dropped Don Kepple of Akron 3 and 2, and Poston beat Curt Sampson of Hudson 3 and 2.

Kingston Tourney Needs Four Teams

Three teams have registered for the Kingston Festival Baseball Tournament. There are still openings for four teams that would like to play in the tourney.

Boys ages 8-12 are eligible to play. The team entry fee is $20. Inquiries may be directed to Gary Walsh at 642 - 2304 by Saturday.

The games are to be played on June 25 and 26 with the championship games on June 27.

GRIP, NOT GRIPE, OVER HITTING—Willie McCovey, the Giants' giant this year, shows you that grip he uses at bat. McCovey is making a bid for the Triple Crown in hitting and other clubs are switching defenses to try to stop him.

Laurelville defeated Pickaway, 6-1, and Washington Saltcreek, banging two of the Tri County Little League baseball action Thursday.

Whitworth Gal To Beat In Tourney

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Kathy Whitworth, leading winner on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour this year, was favored to win the second richest tournament on the circuit — the $30,000 Pabst Classic — which opened today at Raymond Memorial course.

"You beat Whitworth and you'll win," was the advice LPGA Tournament Director Lenzie Wirtz had for the 62 other lady swingers — a record field here—before the firing opened.

Kathy had the odds on her side, however. She has won more tournaments (5) and more money ($22,775) than any other golfer on the tour this season. She will be shooting for a $4,500 first prize here.

The 29-year-old Kathy showed some modesty about it all.

"I'm having a good year but I really haven't been putting very well until last week."

She added that "There are a lot of fine young players on the tour."

The event, which runs through Sunday, actually got under way Thursday with pro-am play, considered only a practice round for the pros.

Reds Edge Past Giants, 8-7; Making Rose A Prophet

San Francisco Faces Atlanta Braves Tonight

ATLANTA (AP)—There'll be no rest for the shell-shocked San Francisco Giants' pitching staff when it opens a four-game series with the powerful Braves tonight.

Giants' pitching, particularly the relief, was blasted for 27 runs and 47 hits by the sizzling Cincinnati Reds in a four-game series at Candlestick Park—and that's not including Juan Marichal's five-hit shutout Tuesday.

Cincinnati pounded 18 hits in an 8-7 victory Thursday, winning its third game of the series and making prophets of the Reds' Pete Rose and the Giants' Willie McCovey in the free-swinging contest.

Following the Reds' 11-2 romp Wednesday, Rose explained Cincy's success: "We've been having pitching problems so if the other team scores seven runs, we've got to go out and score eight."

McCovey, facing a four-man outfield shift throughout the series, pointed out: "No shift will work if I knock the ball out of the park, unless they stack the outfielders on top of each other."

Both players were correct Thursday—Rose predicting the exact outcome as Tommy Helms' ninth-inning double snapped a 7-7 tie, and McCovey blasting a two-run homer against the shift to give the Giants a 6-3 lead after seven innings.

McCovey, possibly hoping to face a conventional defense, takes a league-leading 22 homers into the Atlanta series. The big first baseman also had a run-scoring single, giving him 54 runs batted in.

Right-hander Gaylord Perry, gunning for his 10th victory, was betrayed in the eighth when third baseman Jim Davenport bobbled Tony Perez' grounder with one out.

Darrell Chaney walked, and pinch-batter Fred Whitfield cracked a run-scoring single to right. Chaney was tagged out going to third on the play, but Rose singled and Bob Tolán tagged a three-run homer for a 7-6 lead.

North-South Cage Game Is Sold Out

MARION, Ohio (AP)—The news is SRO—Standing Room Only—for anyone still wanting to buy a ticket for the 10th annual North-South Cage Classic Saturday night.

Officials say basketball fans have claimed all 4,500 seats in the Marion Coliseum. It's the first time the game, played here the past five years, has been sold out.

Pro-Am Prelude To PGA Played

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Teams led by Patty Berg, Joyce Kasmierski and Jane Woodworth tied for top honors in Thursday's pro-am prelude to the Ladies Professional Golf Association's Pabst Classic.

The three gal golfers picked up $125 each for leading their teams to scores of 58, 14 under par over the sprawling Raymond Memorial course.

BPO Elks, Purina, Legion Cop Little League Games

The BPO Elks beat the Herald Hawks, 9-4, while Bingham Drugs was downed by Purina, 17-15, and American Legion edged Coke, 3-2 in Little League Major action Thursday.

The Elks took a 4-0 lead in the first inning, and scored two more in the second. The Hawks got their first three runs in the third inning and then scored one in the fourth. The Elks wrapped up the game in the fifth inning by scoring three runs. The Hawks had four runs on five hits while the Elks had nine runs on seven hits.

Phil Roll was the big hitter for the game. He connected for a home run in the third inning. The only other extra baser was scored by the Elks' Randy Cradlebaugh. He had a double.

Tom England started on the mound for the Herald allowing three hits, one walk and striking out three. Doug Radabaugh took over the job at the end of the second inning and gave up four hits and three bases on balls while striking out three batters.

RICK Cradlebaugh pitched three innings for the winners and gave up four hits, three walks and struck out three. He was relieved by Randy Thomas who allowed only one hit and struck out four while giving up no bases on balls.

President Roots, But Senators Lose, 2-0

Richard Nixon was the people's choice in 1968 but he's not lining up bipartisan support from a certain group of Washington Senators in 1969.

The President showed up at Robert F. Kennedy Stadium with daughter Julie and son-in-law David Eisenhower Thursday night, just in time to see the baseball-playing Senators blow a 2-0 decision to the red-hot Baltimore Orioles.

It was Mr. Nixon's third trip to the ballpark to root, root, root for the home team and the third time he's struck out. That might be party politics, as far as Bob Short, owner of the Senators and treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, is concerned, but it's no way to treat a loyal supporter like Manager Ted Williams, who voted for Mr. Nixon last November.

In other American League activity, the Boston Red Sox blanked Cleveland 3-0, the New York Yankees downed Detroit 5-3, Minnesota flattened California 8-1 and the Chicago White Sox outlasted Seattle 13-10. Kansas City and Oakland were not scheduled.

President Nixon was delayed in leaving for the ballpark by a news conference and didn't get there until the eighth inning. Jim Hannan had blanked the Orioles for seven innings but tired and gave way to Dennis Higgins to start the eighth.

Higgins was in hot water immediately. Don Buford doubled, Paul Blair beat out a bunt and slugging Frank Robinson was advancing to the bat, which was bad enough. Then the President made his entrance.

Home plate umpire John Flaherty held up the game until Mr. Nixon's party was seated. Williams ordered his infield to play back and Robinson bounced into a double play as Buford scored.

That was all Dave McNally needed as he hurled a two-hitter for his 10th victory and the Orioles' seventh in a row. Baltimore pushed across an insurance run in the ninth on Brooks Robinson's double, a wild pitch and Dave Johnson's sacrifice fly.

McNally yielded only leadoff singles to Tim Cullen in the third and Paul Casanova in the ninth.

"The President was really pulling hard for us," reported Short, who sat in the presidential box. "He told me, 'You've got to win this one.' He was really cheering and said he hoped Frank Howard would get up in the ninth. He felt pretty bad that we couldn't win with him here."

Kuhn Moves To Break Up Baseball Gambling Ties

NEW YORK (AP)—Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn has moved to force a breakup of ties between two major league teams and Las Vegas casinos.

A formal announcement of Kuhn's action was set here today after a month's probe of stock holdings in the gambling business by top officials of the Atlanta Braves and Oakland Athletics.

Delbert W. Coleman, chairman of Parvin-Dohrmann Co. which owns three hotels and casinos, is slated to bow out as a director of the Braves, officials disclosed Thursday.

Three other baseball figures—Braves President William C. Bartholomay, Braves Director John J. Louis Jr., and Oakland owner, Charles O. Finley—will stay in the sport, but are expected to scrap their ties with Parvin-Dohrmann.

Kuhn's move came while pro football is also entangled in a controversy over Commissioner Pete Rozelle's demand that New York Jets quarterback Joe Namath sell a bar allegedly used by gamblers. Namath vowed to retire from football instead.

Baseball traditionally has frowned on any ties with gambling since a World Series scandal in 1919.

Coleman, reached in New York, said the owners had volunteered to end the double duty by three Braves executives on the boards of directors of both the club and Parvin-Dohrmann.

Coleman, while quitting the baseball board, will keep his estimated $18 million in stock in Parvin-Dohrmann, which owns the Stardust, Fremont and Aladdin casinos in Las Vegas. Coleman owns another firm which leases and operates two of the casinos.

Bartholomay and Louis are slated to resign from the Parvin-Dohrmann board, officials said.

Top Finalists In MAC Golf Clash Today

MANSFIELD, Ohio (AP)—Two Ohioans who live 20 miles apart emerged today as the top two finalists in the 11th annual Mid-America Junior Open Golf Tournament.

Steve Groves of Lancaster and Greg Poston of Logan were to decide the title in a 36-hole championship match over the 6,200-yard Possum Run course.

Groves moved into the finals with a 4 and 3 win Thursday over Doug Mowery of Oak Park, Mich. Poston defeated Neil Gerhart of Lexington, Ohio, 1-up with a birdie 4 on the 18th hole.

Groves, a semifinalist last year, was 16-over-par for 96 holes of match play, while Poston, who will be a sophomore at Miami University at Oxford, was 5-over-par for 99 holes.

Finals also were set today in four other tournament flights that began with 249 boys from seven states competing.

Two of the matches pitted Rick Zollinger of Columbus against Jim Marko of Mayfield Heights, and Bob Hackett of Hockessin, Del., against Denny Davis of Findlay. Contenders in the other two flights remained to be decided in semifinal play earlier in the day.

In quarterfinals Thursday, Mowery downed Garry Murray of Jackson 5 and 4. Groves defeated Tod Crandall of Ashtabula 2 and 1. Gerhart dropped Don Kepple of Akron 3 and 2, and Poston beat Curt Sampson of Hudson 3 and 2.

Kingston Tourney Needs Four Teams

Three teams have registered for the Kingston Festival Baseball Tournament. There are still openings for four teams that would like to play in the tourney.

Boys ages 8-12 are eligible to play. The team entry fee is $20. Inquires may be directed to Gary Walsh at 642-2304 by Saturday.

The games are to be played on June 25 and 26 with the championship games on June 27.

GRIP, NOT GRIPE, OVER HITTING—Willie McCovey, the Giants' giant this year, shows you that grip he uses at bat. McCovey is making a bid for the Triple Crown in hitting and other clubs are switching defenses to try to stop him.

Shuvee Set For Race At Belmont

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

Shuvee will try for her crown Saturday while Dike will be out to prove he's not just a show horse.

Shuvee, owned by Mrs. Whitney Stone, will go after the $100,000-added Coaching Club American Oaks at Belmont Park in a bid to become the second winner of the New York Racing Association's Triple Crown for 3-year-old fillies.

Dike, third in the Kentucky Derby and Belmont Stakes behind Majestic Prince and Arts and Letters, will be trying for more than show money in the $100,000 Arlington Classic for 3-year-olds and he is favored to bring home first money for Claiborne Farm.

Still another $100,000-added race will be on tap at the Hollywood Invitation Turf Handicap. Shuvee is expected to be opposed by five in her attempt to add the 1 1/4-mile CC American Oaks to her victories in the Acorn and Mother Goose and duplicate the triple scored last year by the now-retired Dark Mirage.

Once again Shuvee's toughest competition is expected to come from Walter Kitchen's Hail to Patsy, runner-up in the Acorn and Mother Goose. Other expected starters are Richard Bokum II's Restless Tornado, R.R. Dodderidge's Polly Piper, Hobeau Farm's Scarlet Larkspur and Marcia W. Schott's Secret Verdict.

John Carlos Eyes NCAA Run Victory

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Super sprinter John Carlos says he's talking to the professional football people because "I'll tell you honestly, I'm out for the money."

But before that day comes, the young man who stirred controversy and was sent home after his black-fisted salute in the Olympics is thinking of today and his special goal: Running the world's first 100-yard dash in under nine seconds.

"If I get a good start tomorrow the record's gonna go," the San Jose State star said after "easing off" and winning his 100-yard heat as the NCAA championships opened Thursday.

Shuvee Set For Race At Belmont

By ED SCHUYLER JR.

Associated Press Sports Writer

Shuvee will try for her crown Saturday while Dike will be out to prove he's not just a show horse.

Shuvee, owned by Mrs. Whitney Stone, will go after the $100,000-added Coaching Club American Oaks at Belmont Park in a bid to become the second winner of the New York Racing Association's Triple Crown for 3-year-old fillies.

Dike, third in the Kentucky Derby and Belmont Stakes behind Majestic Prince and Arts and Letters, will be trying for more than show money in the $100,000 Arlington Classic for 3-year-olds and he is favored to bring home first money for Claiborne Farm.

Still another $100,000-added race will be on tap at the Hollywood Invitation Turf Handicap. Shuvee is expected to be opposed by five in her attempt to add the 14-mile CC American Oaks to her victories in the Acorn and Mother Goose and duplicate the triple scored last year by the now-retired Dark Mirage.

Once again Shuvee's toughest competition is expected to come from Walter Kitchen's Hail to Patsy, runner-up in the Acorn and Mother Goose. Other expected starters are Richard Bokum II's Restless Tornado, R.R. Dodderidge's Polly Piper, Hobeau Farm's Scarlet Larkspur and Marcia W. Schott's Secret Verdict.

John Carlos Eyes NCAA Run Victory

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Super sprinter John Carlos says he's talking to the professional football people because "I'll tell you honestly, I'm out for the money."

But before that day comes, the young man who stirred controversy and was sent home after his black-listed salute in the Olympics is thinking of today and his special goal: Running the world's first 100-yard dash in under nine seconds.

"If I get a good start tomorrow the record's gonna go," the San Jose State star said after "easing off" and winning his 100-yard heat as the NCAA championships opened Thursday.

The Adult Reading World

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Pickaway County Public Library offers a variety of books for summertime reading pleasure. A list of suggested books for adult reading will be reviewed weekly by The Herald by the library staff.

"Your Personal Guide to Successful Retirement" by Sidney Margolius. Informed planning can make the retirement years among the best of your life. With more than a million people reaching age 65 each year and many people retiring earlier, this is a timely book. Six steps are outlined to help people anticipating retirement or already retired to discover new opportunities for security, usefulness and enjoyment. Planning the budget and building income; meeting health care costs and controlling living expenses; arranging personal affairs are discussed frankly and realistically. The final chapter lists opportunities for recreation, travel, education and service.

"Best Places to Live When You Retire." by Helen Heusinkveld. A national directory of retirement residences, this book gives more specific information on living quarters. It is arranged by states.

"Only In Alaska" by Tay Thomas. Tay Thomas, the wife of Lowell Thomas, Jr., writes with exuberance about a young family's adventures in the 49th state. Alaska is not entirely a land of icy wind and snow, Mrs.

Thomas tells of visits along the Bering coast where the family found it difficult to remember that this was not a New England or even a Florida beach. There are descriptions of places like Juneau, Fairbanks and Fort Yukon, as well as the vast interior, but there is much exciting detail about the everyday life in the land that became their home.

She has something to recount of the impact of modern western ways on Eskimo culture and the problems developing for a people who have been able to survive for centuries in one of the harshest climatic regions of the world and now facing twentieth century technology.

"The Supper of the Lamb" by Robert Farrar Capon. Robert Capon introduces himself, in the art of cookery, as an amateur, but not a nonprofessional, as one who dislikes gadgets, shortcuts and diets.

This is not really a cookbook in the usual sense, most of the recipes are in the last chapter, but rather some few recipes, introduced with a delightful mixture of comments and explanation of the cookery ingredients and their preparations and observations on life and living, the latter drawn from the wisdom and experience of his true vocation. Robert Farrar is an ordained Episcopal minister, Professor of Theology and Instructor in Greek.

"The Bouviers: Portrait of an American Family." by John H. Davis. Michel Bouvier, a cabinet maker, arrived in America in 1815. From this humble beginning evolved an American family known for its wealth and social standing. It is the fourth generation, however, that has fired the interest and curiosity of the world. The reader will meet many Bouviers as remarkable and interesting as Jacqueline Onassis. Illustrated with many photographs.

"Between Parent & Teenager." Dr. Haim G. Ginott. Parent's who seek sensible help in bringing up their teenagers will find in this guide the lively writing and realistic examples of behavior that made Dr. Ginott's first book, "Between Parent & Child," a record-breaking best-seller.

Ground Shakes, But Not Quakes

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — The ground shook in Houston Thursday for the third straight day, but Dr. Jean Claude de Bremaecker, a geophysicist at Rice University, said this probably resulted from explosions in the Gulf of Mexico in seismographic explorations rather than earthquakes.

All occurred about 9 a.m. and all registered 1.5 on the Richter scale.

"The chances of earthquakes occurring at the same time like that are astronomical," Dr. Bremaecker said.

No License Case Tops Muny Court

A no license case topped the Municipal court docket Thursday, along with two unnecessary noise cases.

James R. Buskey, 19, Lockborne AFB, forfeited a $50 bond for driving a motor vehicle without a license. He was picked up on Route 23.

Jerry A. Young, 19, of 420 Stella Ave., forfeited a $19 bond for making unnecessary noise with a motor vehicle.

Jeffrey D. Clifton, 19, 905 Circle Drive, was fined $10 and court costs for making unnecessary noise with a motor vehicle.

There were 11 other out of county offenders who forfeited bonds.

Ohio Senate Subcommittee OKs State Employee Pay Hike

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A bill to give a $500 across-the-board pay raise to state employees making less than $8,300 a year has gotten the approval of a Senate subcommittee.

The bill, which includes another $330 a year in fringe benefits, is expected to be reported out of the full Senate Finance Committee next week.

Still to face action in the House, the proposal would cost the state an estimated $41 million. It has the backing of the Ohio Civil Service Employees Association.

The State Employees Union, smaller but more militant than the OCSEA, announced, however, it will go ahead with a planned protest march on the Statehouse next Tuesday.

In other action Thursday, the Senate passed a bill to allot an incoming governor $30,000 in expenses so he can begin working his way into government in the period between his election and inauguration.

The vote was 23-0. There was no debate.

The bill, designed to help the new administration get off the ground, would enable the governor-elect to put his cabinet choices on the state payroll prior to the time they actually take command.

Incoming cabinet officials would work with their outgoing counterparts prior to taking office.

A bill to give a tax exemption to industries for pollution control devices such as smokestacks passed 59-22 after considerable debate.

An attempt to amend it to take out the exemption was tabled. The amendment was offered by Rep. Richard Christiansen, D-17 Mansfield.

Christiansen said he couldn't understand why an exemption should be given for complying with a law already on the books.

A companion bill to permit tax exemption certificates to be passed along to new owners passed 75-3. Both bills earlier were approved by the Senate. They now go to the governor for signing.

The House passed measures designating Interstate 70 as "General Dwight D. Eisenhower Memorial Highway" and Interstate 75 as "American Legion Memorial Highway."

Waverly Plant Labor Dispute Heard By Panel

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—The Atomic Energy Labor Management Relations Panel continued to hear both sides of a Waverly Atomic Plant contract dispute today, winding up a two-day hearing.

The panel members, all presidential appointees, and not a part of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, is empowered only to make recommendations to both sides.

In this case the recommendations, when announced at a later date, will go to Local 3-689 of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union, and Goodyear Corp., which operates the Waverly plant in Pike County for the Atomic Energy Commission.

Members of the union went on strike May 1 but returned to their jobs May 20 to permit the panel to hear both sides of the contract dispute and make recommendations.

Constitutional

In none of these states does there appear to be any prospect at this time that a resolution petitioning for a convention will be passed.

The 33 states that have petitioned for a constitutional convention on the reapportionment issue are:

Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Mexico, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Virginia, Washington and Wyoming.

In addition, three other states—Alaska, California, and Rhode Island—have petitioned Congress to initiate a reapportionment amendment but have not asked for the calling of a constitutional convention.

Efforts have been made to rescind some of the resolutions calling for a convention, but none have succeeded.

Rule Man Sane In Murder Case

CINCINNATI (AP) — Ralph Thomas, 33, was ruled sane and able to stand trial Thursday on charges of first degree murder, arson and assault to kill.

The Cincinnati man was examined at Lima State Hospital previously.

Police said Thomas started a gasoline fire at a residence here on March 29 that fatally injured Richard Settles, 40, and burned Oliver Harris, 40. The three allegedly had argued over a woman.

Thomas was indicted on the three charges April 18. No trial date has been set.

Cancel Berkeley's Riot Insurance

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Riot insurance for the City of Berkeley is being canceled on grounds it is "a particularly bad risk," says City Atty. Robert Anderson.

He announced Wednesday that a Swiss firm had sent a letter saying the company would not honor personal and property liability claims, effective June 27.
